It distinguishes between passive and active supporters of the integration project besides the Euroskeptic segment of the public. Provision of public goods by regional integration is believed to explain passive permissiveness while the main impetus for integration comes from those who may reap above average benefits from it. This book contends that the groups of active supporters have historically been changing within the Union namely the political Left and Right are changing their roles in negotiating future developments. Yet the evolution of the EU is also shaped by the solutions adopted to accommodate ethnic and cultural diversity. The empirical tests involve opinion survey data taken from the Eurobarometer series, World Value and European Social Surveys and the International Social Survey Programme expert ratings as well as party elite documents from the Manifesto Project Database.
