Movies are like giant vats

Movies are like giant vats of stew. In order to make a really good stew, you must put a lot of different things in it. For example, vegetable stew has carrots, potatoes, and an occasional brook stick along with an assortment of other things. Movies have a lot of ingredients to make them good as well. There are plenty of great "movie stews" out there, but there are definitely good ones. By this I'm talking about Age of Adventure: The Detective. This movie has all the essential ingredients in it. It has to have some kind of immaturity, a good plot, and distinct characters that you will remember forever.

There is a lot of the immaturity ingredients in this stew. For example, the main character lives in a family that has one thousand steps. He tries to get a slinky to go down every step and it slips on the last step. Then he gets back up to try it again. Another example of when his immaturity shows is when he terrorizes an Indian who has to balance on a pole for three days. He does this by shooting poisonous vipers of reptiles at him and violently shaking the pole yelling, "Earthquake now!"

Every movie needs a good plot and this one, as mature as it takes the plot. The main character is on a mission to find the sacred bit of two Indian clans. If he doesn't, they will go to war and annihilate each other. Little does he know the person who hired him stole the bit, so ends up getting the bit from him and barely makes it back in time. He arrived just before the two Indian armies were about to clash and ran through with the bit, halving it at the top of his lungs, "Shakuar!" The word makes the Indians bow down because it is the name of the sacred bit.

Characters are the main "ingredients" that makes a movie. The character is really weird. He arrives in a formal dinner party and took an appointment of food and arranged it on his face. He had appetizers in his teeth, cucumbers in his eyes, and baby tomatoes in his nose. Then, when he was being loaded for his mission, he started making finger puppets in front of the projector, and then, using his finger puppets, attacked the people on the slide.

Age of Adventure: The Detective will fill you up and watch it. ©
