What is this thing called Knowledge? Duncan Pritchard, 2013-10-01 What is knowledge Where does it come from What kinds of knowledge are there Can we know anything at all This lucid and engaging introduction grapples with these central questions in the theory of knowledge offering a clear non partisan view of the main themes of epistemology Both traditional issues and contemporary ideas are discussed in sixteen easily digestible chapters each of which conclude with a useful summary of the main ideas discussed study questions annotated further reading and a guide to internet resources Each chapter also features text boxes providing bite sized summaries of key concepts and major philosophers and clear and interesting examples are used throughout The book concludes with an annotated guide to general introductions to epistemology a glossary of key terms and a summary of the main examples used in epistemology This an ideal first textbook in the theory of knowledge for undergraduates coming to philosophy for the first time The third edition has been revised and updated throughout and features two new chapters on religious knowledge and scientific knowledge as part of a whole new section on what kinds of knowledge there are In addition the text as a whole has been refreshed to keep it up to date with current developments

An Introduction to Theory of Knowledge Russell A Peterson, 2022-02-11 INTRODUCTION There have been very few major works written in the field of epistemology during the past couple of decades For the learning theorist this has been unfortunate The absence is quite evident as we review the writing of these theorists How thin is learning theory when it has not been grounded on theory of knowledge It has not been my intention however to write a major work in epistemology offering something new in theory moreover I have not made any attempt to provide an historical perspective of what epistemologists over the past twenty five years have given us While questions pertaining to learning theory are to be found on every page of the book there has not been a studied attempt to unite epistemology and learning theory Rather I have set for my goal a discussion of eight major epistemological problems I do not pretend to say that all questions raised have been answered for every reader They have been answered to my satisfaction however Perhaps the essence of the discussion will assist you to formulate your own answers The first question I raise is this one I believe that the existence of knowledge is the ability of the mind to interiorize its essence or materials In what ways then can we raise questions about knowledge unless we understand the implicative values inherent in the fact of knowledge Does this force us to begin with knowledge as a given To do so would insist we think of the intellective process as the embodiment of a knowledge in order to experience knowledge Our question then is knowledge a given Two the product of thought is this the only means at our disposal for identifying knowledge Three why do we believe that the mind is not a receptor of knowledge Four why do we insist that it is the will that supplies the mind with its power to think Five what is the science of perception Why is its task to formulate the criteria of reality Six why is it that in perception alone we are able to see why the mind uses meaning to find meaning Seven why does the mind find it necessary to order and provide the cognitive energy for the operant principles which direct the knowing power found in certitude Eight what is really being implied when we say that to know means the subject has actualized its object and experienced its meaning If there is a theory which may be in one sense labelled new in this work on epistemology it would be in reference to my use of the concept experience Is there knowledge or meaning unless the mind experiences is the one question which I hope will be answered for every reader Russell A Peterson Epistemology & Methodology I: M.

Bunge, 2012-12-06 In this Introduction we shall state the business of both descriptive and normative epistemology and shall locate them in the map of learning This must be done because epistemology has been pronounced dead and methodology nonexistent and because when acknowledged at all they are often misplaced 1 DESCRIPTIVE EPISTEMOLOGY The following problems are typical of classical epistemology i What can we know ii How do we know iii What if anything does the subject contribute to his knowledge iv What is truth v How can we recognize truth vi What is probable knowledge as opposed to certain knowledge vii Is there a priori knowledge and if so of what viii How are knowledge and action related ix How are knowledge and language related x What is the status of concepts and propositions In some guise or other all of these problems are still with us To be sure if construed as a demand for an inventory of knowledge the first problem is not a philosophical one any more than the question What is there But it is a genuine philosophical problem if construed thus What kinds of object are knowable and which ones are not However it is doubtful that philosophy can offer a correct answer to this problem without the help of science and technology For example only these disciplines can tell us whether man can know not only phenomena appearances but also noumena things in themselves or self existing objects Handbook of Analytic

Philosophy of Medicine Kazem Sadegh-Zadeh, 2015-04-06 Medical practice is practiced morality and clinical research belongs to normative ethics The present book elucidates and advances this thesis by 1 analyzing the structure of medical language knowledge and theories 2 inquiring into the foundations of the clinical encounter 3 introducing the logic and methodology of clinical decision making including artificial intelligence in medicine 4 suggesting comprehensive theories of organism life and psyche of health illness and disease of etiology diagnosis prognosis prevention and therapy and 5
