

Writing Narratives

Orientation

The orientation is described as the beginning of a story. It is where the writer sets the scene, creates a mood and introduces the characters. The writer tries to explain to the reader what the story is going to be about.

- Introduce where the story is about (where)
- Introduce when the story takes place (when)
- Introduce what the story is about (what)
- Introduce why things will be happening

The orientation focuses on, and should include, the following 'W' words:

- who
- what
- when
- where
- why

Narratives

Complication

A problem that the main character in the story has to deal with. Adding a complication is to make the story more interesting. The writer can build up how the characters are feeling about the problem they are faced with. It will involve fantasy, as it would not usually occur in real life.

Narratives

Sequence of Events

The sequence of events is where a writer describes to the reader what happens in their story. The sequence of events is connected to the main problem. The writer can build up how the characters are feeling about the problem they are faced with. It will involve fantasy, as it would not usually occur in real life.

Narratives

Resolution

The resolution is the part of the narrative where the problem is solved or worked out. The writer can build up how the characters are feeling about the problem they are faced with. It will involve fantasy, as it would not usually occur in real life.

Are you ready to transform your students into passionate storytellers? Packed with practical time-saving classroom resources, this manual makes planning and implementing the Seven Steps just as fun as learning it. Inside this Step by Step guide, you'll find theory and techniques for each Step, annotated writing samples showing the techniques in action, fun and flexible curriculum-aligned writing activities and templates, over 100 differentiated writing topics, plus picture prompts, planning and assessment resources, and a Putting It All Together chapter.

Developing Writing Teachers Terry Locke, 2014-08-07

The premise of Developing Writing Teachers is this: When teachers of writing identify as writers, it adds a special dimension to their writing pedagogy. Practical and accessible while drawing on a range of relevant research and theory, this text is distinguished by its dual focus on teachers as writers and the teaching of writing. Part I addresses the question: What does it take for a teacher of writing to develop an identity as writer? Using case studies and teacher narratives, it guides readers to an understanding of the current status of writing as the 21st century unfolds, the role of expressive writing in developing a writing identity, the relationship of writing to genre and rhetoric, writing and professional identity, and writing as design. Part II focuses on pedagogical practice and helping writer-teachers develop a toolkit to take into their classrooms. Coverage includes building a community of writing practice, the nature of writing as process, the place of grammar, the role of information communication and representational technologies, and how assessment properly used can help develop writing. Ideal for pre-service and in-service courses on the teaching of writing, the Companion Website provides additional readings, documents, PowerPoint presentations, assessment resources, and lesson and unit plans and planning guides.
