wasn't long until he learned that the Seiken Jitsu was much more than just fighting. It required the development of Character and an understanding of Body, Mind, and Spirit to create the union of Feeling and Desire and to see what it is True. The Master honed his abilities during World War II, seeing combat as a way to test his fighting skills; he referred to it as the only place where he was able to use all of his abilities. Once his system was complete, no enemy was able to touch him. There was a price to pay for this knowledge, and he ultimately came to believe that the true purpose of the martial arts was much more than physical skills; it was a means to develop Character and the ability to learn how to fight so you did not have to fight. This was what the Master wanted to impart to his only student. Lessons From a 21st Century Samurai is the history of the Master and his student, preserved for future martial artists and for those wanting to use extreme physical training in any form to develop a better understanding of themselves and what their purpose in life is.

In Shogakukan Kokugo Daijiten, the Japanese dictionary, Bushido is defined as a unique philosophy (ronri) that spread through the warrior class from the Muromachi (Chusei) period.
