1. The first step in the process of the investigation is the identification of the problem. This is done by the investigator who is responsible for the study. The investigator must first identify the problem and then determine the scope of the problem. The investigator must also determine the objectives of the study and the methods to be used. The investigator must also determine the data to be collected and the analysis to be performed. The investigator must also determine the results of the study and the conclusions to be drawn. The investigator must also determine the limitations of the study and the implications of the study. The investigator must also determine the significance of the study and the contribution to the field. The investigator must also determine the validity of the study and the reliability of the results. The investigator must also determine the ethical considerations of the study and the protection of the subjects. The investigator must also determine the funding of the study and the dissemination of the results. The investigator must also determine the publication of the study and the archiving of the data. The investigator must also determine the review of the study and the approval of the results. The investigator must also determine the implementation of the study and the monitoring of the progress. The investigator must also determine the evaluation of the study and the assessment of the impact. The investigator must also determine the dissemination of the results and the communication of the findings. The investigator must also determine the conclusion of the study and the final report. The investigator must also determine the final review of the study and the final approval of the results. The investigator must also determine the final dissemination of the results and the final communication of the findings. The investigator must also determine the final conclusion of the study and the final report. The investigator must also determine the final review of the study and the final approval of the results. The investigator must also determine the final dissemination of the results and the final communication of the findings.
