

A detailed view of a Victor Manual Lathe 1660S. The machine is painted a light teal color and features a complex arrangement of metal components including the headstock, tailstock, bed, and carriage. A large, polished metal lathe rod runs through the center. The left side of the machine has a control panel with several knobs, switches, and a large handwheel. The right side shows the tailstock and a large handwheel for the cross-slide. The machine is set against a dark, industrial background.
