World Economic Outlook April 2004 China:

China's Capitalism Tobias ten Brink, 2019-02-14 Since 1978 the end of the Mao era economic growth in China has outperformed every previous economic expansion in modern history While the largest Western economies continue to struggle with the effects of the deepest recession since World War II the People's Republic of China still enjoys growth rates that are massive in comparison In the country's smog choked cities a chaotic climate of buying and selling prevails Tireless expansion and inventiveness join forces with an attitude of national euphoria in which anything seems possible No longer merely the workshop of the world China is poised to become a global engine for innovation In China's Capitalism Tobias ten Brink considers the history of the socioeconomic order that has emerged in the People's Republic With empirical evidence and a theoretical foundation based in comparative and international political economy ten Brink analyzes the main characteristics of China's socioeconomic system over time identifies the key dynamics shaping this system's structure and discusses current trends in further capitalist development He argues that hegemonic state business alliances mostly at the local level relative homogeneity of party state elites the maintenance of a low wage regime and unanticipated coincidences between domestic and global processes are the driving forces behind China's rise He also surveys the limits to the state's influence over economic and social developments such as industrial overcapacity and social conflict Ten Brink's framework reveals how combinations of three heterogeneous actors party state institutions firms and workers led to China's distinctive form of capitalism Presenting a coherent and historically nuanced portrait China's Capitalism is essential reading for anyone interested in the socioeconomic order of the People's Republic and the significant challenges facing its continuing development

World Economic Outlook ,2009 The Making of China's Exchange Rate Policy Leong H. Liew,Harry X. Wu,2007 This book examines the major economic and political factors influencing China s exchange rate policies from the foundation of the People s Republic to the present It considers how national economic and political priorities international influences domestic institutional interests and the new constraints imposed by China s rapidly globalising post Mao economy determine exchange rate policy The authors argue that China s exchange rate decisions were not made simply in response to external pressures rather that they were formed on the basis of domestic assessments of domestic circumstances to serve domestic interests They go on to illustrate that such decisions are made on the basis of what policymakers perceive are the nation s best interests and thus constitute dynamic interplay between national priorities and the interests of institutional and non institutional actors in the policy arena Fulfilling the demand for further research on how China formulates exchange rate policy this book will strongly appeal to a wide ranging audience including students academics and researchers with an interest in political economy Asian studies international relations comparative politics international business and international economics and finance Policymakers and bankers will also find much to interest them in this book

Pacific Economic Outlook,2005 联合国 United Nations Conference on Trade and Development,2005-09 Looking at recent trends in the world economy from the perspective of the Millennium Development Goals MDGs the good news is that in 2004 growth in the developing countries was rapid and more broad based than it had been for many years Strong per capita income growth continued in China and India the two countries with the largest number of people living in absolute poverty Latin America has seen a rebound from its deep economic crisis and a return to faster growth fuelled by export expansion Africa again reached a growth rate of more than 4.5 per cent in 2004 Moreover relatively strong growth in many African countries is envisaged in the short term owing to continuing strong demand for a number of their primary commodities The bad news is that even growth rates of close to 5 per cent in sub-Saharan Africa are insufficient to attain the MDGs and that the outlook for 2005 overshadowed by increasing global imbalances is for slower growth in the developed countries with attendant effects on the developing countries Since the beginning of the new millennium the performance of the world economy has been shaped by the increasingly important role of China and India Rapid growth in these two large economies has spilled over to many other developing countries and has established East and South Asia as a new growth pole in the world economy Their ascent has been accompanied by new features of global interdependence such as a brighter outlook for exporters of primary commodities rising trade among developing countries increasing exports of capital from the developing to the developed countries but also intensified competition on the global markets for certain types of
