of a Ramble in the United States and Canada in the Spring and Summer of 1881 W. H. Russell, 1882 Hesperothen Notes from the West Vol 1 of 2 A Record of a Ramble in the United States and Canada in the Spring and Summer of 1881 On the 16th of April last in pursuance of an arrangement to that effect which was entered into some months earlier with the Duke of Sutherland a small party of gentlemen and one lady left Liverpool in the Cunard Company's steamer Gallia with the object of making a tour in the United States Previous to their departure Mr Henry Crosfield the Auditor of the London and North Western Railway Company had been in communication with friends in America and had in concert with them sketched out a general scheme to enable the visitors to traverse the Atlantic States to extend their journey westwards and to obtain the best possible view of the country in the limited space of time at their disposal Although all were on pleasure bent those of the tourists who had interests in railways on this side of the world were naturally anxious to study the modes of management which were practised on the principal lines as closely as such a hurried journey would allow them but the main object of the travellers was to see the States to behold with their own eyes the natural features of the vast continent which is exercising a rapidly increasing influence on Great Britain and Europe itself and to view the manners and customs of the great nation which even in its present enormous development gives only the indications of a lusty youth promising a manhood of irresistible vigour and strength in time to come if the body politic fulfils its early hope To be sure the inspection could not be very close minute or protracted Shooting flying is not an art given to all people and the contemplation of man at a hotel or in a street as one looks around in the dining room or out of a railway train does not afford satisfactory foundation for solid knowledge or comfortable conviction But we had to do the best we could There were for most of us the attractions in the journey which novelty possesses There were pleasures in anticipation in the sight of the wonderful cities which man has made and of the grand natural spectacles which God has created and these pleasures were I may say now enjoyed most fully For my own part having no railway interests except those I share with so many others in being carried safely swiftly and cheaply by the lines to which I entrust myself for conveyance and having formerly been in the United States my chief desire was to revive if not the pleasures of memory at least the recollections of a country in which I had spent many months of the deepest interest and excitement and where I made friends whose affection and support were of invaluable assistance and comfort to me when I much needed them at a period of terrible trial I was also eager to observe what changes had been effected since the close of the Civil War of one great incident of which I had an unfortunate experience and to revisit scenes the chief features of which had not been effaced from my recollection by the lapse of nigh twenty years The expedition was undertaken under excellent auspices From all quarters of the United States as soon as our intention was made known there had come not only expressions of satisfaction and offers of assistance but an actual competition in good offices and amid the friendly requests of the great Railway Corporations on the other side of the Atlantic that the visitors would avail themselves of the resources of their Companies the only difficulty lay in the choice of contending routes Tenders of palace cars and special trains of receptions and banquets poured in on all sides but the programme for our journey was drawn up with a due regard to the number of hours at the disposal of the travellers and ere they set out from England the very day of their return from New York had been determined
