War of the Classes - Large Print Jack London, 2017-06-26 Large Print When I was a youngster I was looked upon as a weird sort of creature because forsooth I was a socialist Reporters from local papers interviewed me and the interviews when published were pathological studies of a strange and abnormal specimen of man At that time nine or ten years ago because I made a stand in my native town for municipal ownership of public utilities I was branded a red shirt a dynamiter and an anarchist and really decent fellows who liked me very well drew the line at my appearing in public with their sisters But the times changed There came a day when I heard in my native town a Republican mayor publicly proclaim that municipal ownership was a fixed American policy And in that day I found myself picking up in the world No longer did the pathologist study me while the really decent fellows did not mind in the least the propinquity of myself and their sisters in the public eye My political and sociological ideas were ascribed to the vagaries of youth and good natured elderly men patronized me and told me that I would grow up some day and become an unusually intelligent member of the community Also they told me that my views were biased by my empty pockets and that some day when I had gathered to me a few dollars my views would be wholly different in short that my views would be their views And then came the day when my socialism grew respectable still a vagary of youth it was held but romantically respectable Romance to the bourgeois mind was respectable because it was not dangerous As a red shirt with bombs in all his pockets I was dangerous As a youth with nothing more menacing than a few philosophical ideas Germanic in their origin I was an interesting and pleasing personality War of the Classes (1905) .
