many leading automotive and technology companies have turned their attention towards developing advanced driver assistance systems ADAS and self driving vehicles Autonomous vehicles are expected to have their first big impact in closed areas such as mines harbors and loading offloading sites In such areas the legal requirements are less restrictive and the surrounding environment is more controlled and predictable compared to urban areas Expected positive outcomes include increased productivity and safety reduced emissions and the possibility to relieve the human from performing complex or dangerous tasks Within these sites different truck and trailer systems are used to transport materials These systems are composed of several interconnected modules and are thus large and highly unstable while reversing This thesis addresses the problem of designing efficient motion planning and feedback control frameworks for such systems First a cascade controller for a reversing truck with a dolly steered trailer is presented The unstable modes of the system is stabilized around circular equilibrium configurations using a gain scheduled linear quadratic LQ controller together with a higher level pure pursuit controller to enable path following of piecewise linear reference paths The cascade controller is then used within a rapidly exploring random tree RRT framework and the complete motion planning and control framework is demonstrated on a small scale test vehicle Second a path following controller for a reversing truck with a dolly steered trailer is proposed for the case when the obtained motion plan is kinematically feasible The control errors of the system are modeled in terms of their deviation from the nominal path and a stabilizing LQ controller with feedforward action is designed based on the linearization of the control error model Stability of the closed loop system is proven by combining global optimization theory from linear differential inclusions and linear matrix inequality techniques Third a systematic framework is presented for analyzing stability of the closed loop system consisting of a controlled vehicle and a feedback controller executing a motion plan computed by a lattice planner When this motion planner is considered it is shown that the closed loop system can be modeled as a nonlinear hybrid system Based on this a novel method is presented for analyzing the behavior of the tracking error how to design the feedback controller and how to potentially impose constraints on the motion planner in order to guarantee that the tracking error is bounded and decays towards zero Fourth a complete motion planning and control solution for a truck with a dolly steered trailer is presented A lattice based motion planner is proposed where a novel parametrization of the vehicle s state space is proposed to improve online planning time A time symmetry result is established that enhance the numerical stability of the numerical optimal control solver used for generating the motion primitives Moreover a nonlinear observer for state estimation is developed which only utilizes information from sensors that are mounted on the truck making the system independent of additional trailer sensors The proposed framework is implemented on a full scale truck with a dolly steered trailer and results from a series of field experiments are presented

Fuzzy Systems Ahmad Taher Azar,2010-02-01 While several books are available today that address the mathematical and philosophical foundations of fuzzy logic none unfortunately provides the practicing knowledge engineer system analyst and project manager with specific practical information about fuzzy system modeling Those few books that include applications and case studies concentrate almost exclusively on engineering problems pendulum balancing truck backerupers cement kilns antilock braking systems image pattern recognition and digital signal processing Yet the application of fuzzy logic to engineering problems represents only a fraction of its real potential As a method of encoding and using human knowledge in a form that is very close to the way experts think about difficult complex problems fuzzy systems provide the facilities necessary to break through the computational bottlenecks associated with traditional decision support and expert systems Additionally fuzzy systems provide a rich and robust method of building systems that include multiple conflicting cooperating and collaborating experts a capability that generally eludes not only symbolic expert system users but analysts who have turned to such related technologies as neural networks and genetic algorithms Yet the application of fuzzy logic in the areas of decision support medical systems database analysis and mining has been largely ignored by both the commercial vendors of decision support products and the knowledge engineers who use them

Intelligent Control, Filtering and Model Reduction Analysis for Fuzzy-Model-Based Systems Xiaojie Su,Yao Wen,Yue Yang,Peng Shi,2021-08-17 This book aims to introduce the state of the art research of stability performance analysis and optimal synthesis methods for fuzzy model based systems A series of problems are solved with new approaches of design analysis and synthesis of fuzzy systems including stabilization control and stability analysis dynamic output feedback control fault detection filter design and reduced order model approximation Some efficient techniques such as Lyapunov stability theory linear matrix inequality reciprocally convex approach and cone complementary linearization method are utilized in the approaches This book is a comprehensive reference for researchers and practitioners working on intelligent control model reduction and fault detection of fuzzy systems and is also a useful source of information for senior undergraduates and graduates in these areas The readers will benefit from some new concepts and methodologies with theoretical and practical significance in system analysis and control synthesis

Automation and Robotics Juan-Manuel Ramos-Arreguin,2008-05-01 In this book a set of relevant updated and selected papers in the field of automation and robotics are presented These papers describe projects where topics of artificial intelligence modeling and simulation process target tracking algorithms kinematic constraints of the closed loops non linear control are used in advanced and recent research
