Action of the Trustees of the Boston City Hospital Upon the Petitions for the Introduction (Classic Reprint) Boston City Hospital, 2015-07-12 Excerpt from Action of the Trustees of the Boston City Hospital Upon the Petitions for the Introduction The setting apart of certain existing wards for hom opathic treatment which was admitted as more desirable and which was quite generally advocated by the petitioners would undoubtedly in part reduce the practical difficulties but would only lessen and not overcome them The Hospital is a compact whole with ward divisions not now in the opinion of the Trustees sufficient in number to make so extensive classifications as are desirable Patients are assigned to the various wards according to their sex age and the nature of their complaints Patients nurses and house officers must be transferred from one ward to another according to the exigencies of the cases and the service and the whole is overlooked by single supervisors in different departments all subordinate to a general superintendent who is responsible to the Trustees The successful and economical administration of an institution with an average of three hundred and fifty patients and in all of five hundred and fifty people almost literally under a single roof depends largely upon the harmonious working of its different departments If different methods of practice are introduced into different wards there must be constant confusion and trouble arising among house officers and nurses attempting sometimes to follow one system and sometimes another Nurses and house officers if possibly mentally qualified to pursue their duties under opposite methods and different masters can hardly be expected to be neutral in their opinions and perhaps prejudices and just complaints would inevitably arise and a harmonious administration of details could not be expected About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
