International Financial Governance under Stress Geoffrey R. D. Underhill, Xiaoke Zhang, 2003-04-03 Persistent episodes of global financial crises have placed the existing system of international monetary and financial governance under stress The resulting economic turmoil provides a focal point for rethinking the norms and institutions of global financial architecture and the policy options of public and private authorities at national regional and transnational levels This volume moves beyond analysis of the causes and consequences of recent financial crises and concentrates on issues of policy. Written by distinguished scholars, it focuses on the tension between global market structures and national policy imperatives. Accessible to both specialists and general readers, the analysis is coherent across a broad range of theoretical and empirical cases. Offering a series of reasoned policy responses to financial integration and crises, the volume grapples directly with the institutional and often neglected normative dimensions of international financial architecture. The volume thus constitutes required reading for scholars and policy makers.

New International Financial Architecture and Korean Perspectives Tae-jun Kim, 2001 Financial Crises in "Successful" Emerging Economies Ricardo Ffrench-Davis, 2004-02-18. Financial crises in emerging economies are very different today than they were in the past. Between 1940 and the 1970s such traumas involved large fiscal deficits, repressed domestic financial systems and balance of payments situations that were associated with a sharp worsening of terms of trade. In recent years, however, a new variety of crisis has evolved in Asia and Latin America. Many of the emerging economies that have experienced financial trauma have been considered very successful until the crises explode. This collection focuses on such economies. The five contributors provide policy oriented analysis that seeks to identify crucial variables that affect the probability or intensity of crisis. Jos Antonio Ocampo (ECLAC) and Ricardo Ffrench-Davis explore the variables that play a part in determining whether a financial crisis is likely to occur. They analyze vulnerability zones for certain key variables such as net liquid external liabilities, current account deficits and real exchange rates and examine how and why capital surges have contributed to worsen macroeconomic fundamentals in emerging economies. Manuel Agosin (University of Chile) draws a parallel between Korea and Taiwan showing how the two countries had similar histories between the mid 1960s and the early 1990s, then followed different paths during the 1990s. Ricardo Ffrench-Davis (ECLAC) concentrates on Chile's experience with three positive financial shocks in the 1970s: in 1991-94 and in 1995-97. Jaime Ros (Notre Dame University) explores contrasting situations in Mexico in 1991-94 and 1996-97 and discusses the variables that explain the marked differences between the two episodes. Ricardo Ffrench-Davis is principal regional adviser at ECLAC and co-founder of the Center for Economic Research on Latin America (CIEPLAN). He is the author or editor of fifteen books on international economics, development strategies, foreign financial and Latin American economies, including Reforming the Reforms. Macro Trade Finance. Palgrave Macmillan, 1999.

Controlling Currency Mismatches in Emerging Markets Morris Goldstein, Philip Turner, 2004. In most of the currency crises of the 1990s, the largest output falls have occurred in those emerging economies with large currency mismatches, a phenomenon that occurs when assets and liabilities are denominated in different currencies such that net worth is sensitive to changes in the exchange rate. Currency mismatching makes crisis management much more difficult since it constrains the willingness of the monetary authority to reduce interest rates in a recession for fear of initiating a large fall in the currency.

that would bring with it large scale insolvencies The mismatching also produces a fear of floating on the part of emerging economies sometimes inducing them to make currency regime choices that are not in their own long term interest Morris Goldstein and Philip Turner summarize what is known about the origins of currency mismatching in emerging economies discuss how best to define and measure currency mismatching and review policy options for reducing the size of the problem

Has Globalization Gone Far Enough? Scott C. Bradford, Robert Z. Lawrence, 2004 Annotation How important are the remaining barriers to integration in international goods markets and how would eliminating them affect global and individual countries welfare This book studies these questions using the most comprehensive price data available Bradford and Lawrence find that there is considerable market fragmentation among industrial countries that is firms charging different prices for similar products in different national markets even among countries with low tariff barriers The authors estimate that integration among the eight countries in their sample Australia Canada Germany Italy Japan the Netherlands the United Kingdom and the United States would raise global GDP by more than 500 billion or about 2 percent Remarkably almost half the global gain in these eight countries could be reaped if Japan alone eliminated its international fragmentation

Prospects for a US-Taiwan Free Trade Agreement Nicholas R. Lardy, Daniel H. Rosen, 2004 Taiwan has a special status for the United States as both a leading high technology economic partner and a place of political and security concern The authors look at both the quantitative and qualitative evidence on the potential effects of a US Taiwan free trade agreement FTA both for maximizing US economic benefits and for securing a prosperous and secure future for Taiwan Their analysis indicates that the direct economic benefits of a prospective FTA would be modest and that the FTA could be most valuable to the United States if it leads Taiwan toward greater regional integration

Free Trade Agreements Jeffrey J. Schott, 2004 Economists and trade policymakers address the US initiatives to enter into free trade negotiations with a broad range of countries in the Asia Pacific region the Western Hemisphere and Africa The sheer number of these initiatives is unprecedented and has provoked major policy questions concerning US interests in the negotiations the setting of priorities among the many contenders for concluding free trade agreements FTAs with the United States the objectives of those trading partners and the implications that these agreements could have for broader initiatives such as the Doha Round of global trade talks and the Free Trade Area of the Americas The papers in the volume present the conceptual case for FTAs and how they have worked in the past examine what FTAs imply for the broader global system and discuss specific agreements that are already being pursued Australia Central America Morocco and the Southern African Customs Union or considered ASEAN Brazil Egypt Korea and Taiwan The volume includes
