Unmasking the State Mike McGovern, 2013 A historical ethnography of the socialist period in Guinea Page 5

Unmasking the State Mike McGovern, 2024-05-31 When the Republic of Guinea gained independence in 1958 one of the first policies of the new state was a village to village eradication of masks and other ritual objects it deemed fetishes The Demystification Program as it was called was so urgent it even preceded the building of a national road system In Unmasking the State Mike McGovern attempts to understand why this program was so important to the emerging state and examines the complex role it had in creating a unified national identity In doing so he tells a dramatic story of cat and mouse where minority groups cling desperately to their important and outlawed customs Primarily focused on the communities in the country's southeastern rainforest region people known as Forestiers the Demystification Program operated via a paradox At the same time it banned rituals from Forestiers day to day lives it appropriated them into a state sponsored program of folklorization McGovern points to an important purpose for this by objectifying this polytheistic group's rituals the state created a viable counterexample against which the Muslim majority could define proper modernity Describing the intertwined relationship between national and local identity making McGovern showcases the coercive power and the unintended consequences involved when states attempt to engineer culture

Developing Heritage -

Developing Countries Marie Huber, 2020-11-23 The history of development has paid only little attention to cultural projects This book looks at the development politics that shaped the UNESCO World Heritage programme with a case study of Ethiopian World Heritage sites from the 1960s to the 1980s In a large scale conservation and tourism planning project selected sites were set up and promoted as images of the Ethiopian nation This story serves to illustrate UNESCO's role in constructing a useful past in many African countries engaged in the process of nation building UNESCO experts and Ethiopian elites had a shared interest in producing a portfolio of antiquities and national parks to underwrite Ethiopia's imperial claims to regional hegemony with ancient history The key findings of this book highlight a continuity in Ethiopian history despite the political ruptures caused by the 1974 revolution and UNESCO's transformation from knowledge producer to actual provider of development policies The particular focus on the bureaucratic and political practices of heritage bridges a gap between cultural heritage studies and the history of international organisations The result is a first study of the global discourse on heritage as it emerged in the 1960s development decade Seeing Like a Citizen Kara

Moskowitz, 2019-11-12 In Seeing Like a Citizen Kara Moskowitz approaches Kenya's late colonial and early postcolonial eras as a single period of political economic and social transition In focusing on rural Kenyans the vast majority of the populace and the main targets of development interventions as they actively sought access to aid she offers new insights into the texture of political life in decolonizing Kenya and the early postcolonial world Using multisited archival sources and oral histories focused on the western Rift Valley Seeing Like a Citizen makes three fundamental contributions to our understanding of African and Kenyan history First it challenges the widely accepted idea of the gatekeeper state revealing that state control remained limited and that the postcolonial state was an internally varied and often dissonant institution Second it transforms our understanding of postcolonial citizenship showing that its balance of rights and duties was neither claimed nor imposed but negotiated and differentiated Third it reorients Kenyan historiography away from central Kenya and elite postcolonial politics The result is a powerful investigation of experiences of independence of the meaning and form of development and of how global political practices were composed and recomposed on the ground in local settings

Marx and Lenin in Africa and Asia Harry Verhoeven,2021-11-29 The spectres of Marx and Lenin have long loomed prominently in Africa and Asia and they still do so in the 21st century Many of the founding fathers of postcolonial republics believed socialism could transform their societies Yet what socialism meant in theory and in practice has always been highly heterogeneous and differed markedly from the European experience African and Asian movements did not simply mimic the ideas and institutions of Soviet or European Marxists but endeavoured to define their own experimenting with a variety of interpretations and in the process adapting doctrines and templates to their unique contexts This volume brings together anthropologists historians and political scientists from around the world to reflect on three great challenges which various types of socialists in Africa and Asia have had to simultaneously contend with in their articulations of liberation how to build up empirical and juridical statehood how to forge a nation after colonial divide and rule and how to position themselves in an international order not of their making In a post colonial world this helps centre a key question running through the different chapters what can African and Asian imaginaries institutions and practices tell us about socialism as a global phenomenon The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of Third World Quarterly

International Development Michael Woolcock,2022-12-01 Whether understood as a long run historical process or an intentional political project international development transforms not only societies and economies but also key ideas about how the world works and how problems should be solved In this compelling book Michael Woolcock demonstrates that achieving peace and prosperity for all is supremely contingent and often contentious the means and ends of development are often perceived as alien unjust and disruptive its benefits and costs unequally borne Many development challenges are not technical problems amenable to an expert's solution but require extensive deliberation to find and fit context specific responses Woolcock insists that it is each generation's challenge to find shared legitimate and durable solutions to the moral imperative to reduce human suffering while simultaneously redressing the challenges that development success let alone failure inexorably brings This skillful guide will be essential reading for students and practitioners working in this complex field and for anyone seeking to help make the world a better place
