Urban Nightlife Entertaining Race Class And Culture In Public Space:

Urban Nightlife Reuben A. Buford May, 2014-09-02 Sociologists have long been curious about the ways in which city dwellers negotiate urban public space How do they manage myriad interactions in the shared spaces of the city In Urban Nightlife sociologist Reuben May undertakes a nuanced examination of urban nightlife drawing on ethnographic data gathered in a Deep South college town to explore the question of how nighttime revelers negotiate urban public spaces as they go about meeting socializing and entertaining themselves May's work reveals how diverse parties define these spaces in particular the ongoing social conflict on the streets in bars and nightclubs and in the various public spaces of downtown To explore this conflict May develops the concept of integrated segregation the idea that diverse groups are physically close to one another yet rarely have meaningful interactions rather they are socially bound to those of similar race class and cultural backgrounds May's in depth research leads him to conclude that social tension is stubbornly persistent in part because many participants fail to make the connection between contemporary relations among different groups and the historical and institutional forces that perpetuate those very tensions structural racism remains obscured by a superficial appearance of racial harmony Through May's observations Urban Nightlife clarifies the complexities of race class and culture in contemporary America illustrating the direct influence of local government and nightclub management decision making on interpersonal interaction among groups Watch a video with Reuben A Buford May Watch video now <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VCs1xExStPw>

Unequal City Carla Shedd,2015-10-20 Chicago has long struggled with racial residential segregation high rates of poverty and deepening class stratification and it can be a challenging place for adolescents to grow up Unequal City examines the ways in which Chicago s most vulnerable residents navigate their neighborhoods life opportunities and encounters with the law In this pioneering analysis of the intersection of race place and opportunity sociologist and criminal justice expert Carla Shedd illuminates how schools either reinforce or ameliorate the social inequalities that shape the worlds of these adolescents Shedd draws from an array of data and in depth interviews with Chicago youth to offer new insight into this understudied group Focusing on four public high schools with differing student bodies Shedd reveals how the predominantly low income African American students at one school encounter obstacles their more affluent white counterparts on the other side of the city do not face Teens often travel long distances to attend school which due to Chicago s segregated and highly unequal neighborhoods can involve crossing class race and gang lines As Shedd explains the disadvantaged teens who traverse these boundaries daily develop a keen perception of injustice or the recognition that their economic and educational opportunities are restricted by their place in the social hierarchy Adolescents worldviews are also influenced by encounters with law enforcement while traveling to school and during school hours Shedd tracks the rise of metal detectors surveillance cameras and pat downs at certain Chicago schools Along with police procedures like stop and frisk these prison like practices lead to distrust of authority and feelings of powerlessness among the adolescents who experience mistreatment either firsthand or vicariously Shedd finds that the racial composition of the student body profoundly shapes students perceptions of injustice The more diverse a school is the more likely its students of color will recognize whether they are subject to discriminatory treatment By contrast African American and Hispanic youth whose schools and neighborhoods are both highly segregated and highly policed are less likely to understand their individual and group disadvantage due to their lack of exposure to youth of differing backgrounds Getting Dressed Carrie

Yodanis,2018-10-10 Getting Dressed teaches sociology through the everyday decision of what to wear It is about the rules that shape how we dress and how and why we conform It is about how and why we imitate others We may think about clothing as our personal style and identity But our personal style is not so personal it is social shaped and limited by countless social influences We use clothes to rank and treat each other as better and worse Yet we need each other to become who we are when getting dressed This book is about what we wear why we wear it and why it matters immense knowledge and ethnography to bear in this timely study of the racial barriers that are still firmly entrenched in our society at every class level He focuses in on symbolic racism a new form of racism in America caused by the stubbornly powerful stereotype of the ghetto embedded in the white imagination which subconsciously connects all Black people with crime and poverty regardless of their social or economic position White people typically avoid Black space but Black people are required to navigate the white space as a condition of their existence From Philadelphia street corner conversations to Anderson s own morning jogs through a Cape Cod vacation town he probes a wealth of experiences to shed new light on how symbolic racism makes all Black people uniquely vulnerable to implicit bias in police stops and racial discrimination in our country Back cover African Americans in Higher Education James L. Conyers,Crystal L. Edwards,Kevin B.

Thompson,2020-07-17 While there is a wealth of scholarship on Africana Education no single volume has examined the roles

The Black Ceiling Kevin Woodson, 2023-11-17 America's preeminent law firms investment banks and management consultant firms are known for being difficult workplaces Between long stressful hours on the job low odds of promotions often unrewarding work assignments and up or out personnel practices most people who begin their careers in these institutions leave within several years of starting But life in these firms is especially difficult for Black professionals who leave elite firms more quickly and receive far fewer promotions than their white counterparts As a result they remain highly underrepresented in senior positions Amid increasing calls for diversity in many workplaces why are these institutions still so bad at maintaining cultivating and promoting Black employees Author Kevin Woodson is a sociologist and JD one who knows firsthand what life at an elite law firm feels like as a Black man By examining the experiences of more than 100 Black professionals in elite corporate law firms investment banks and management consulting firms Woodson offers a revelatory new assessment of workplace inequality in high status jobs Black professionals say their biggest obstacle in the workplace is not explicit bias What they identify instead is racial discomfort social alienation and stigma anxiety Woodson shows how this country's larger history of segregation and discrimination influence the micro interactions between individual workers generating firm level patterns of inequality with far reaching implications for efforts to understand and overcome racial inequality in the workplace In calling attention to the racialized nature and impact of many seemingly innocuous and insignificant aspects of professional life Woodson illuminates the impact of certain everyday practices and arrangements in reproducing racial hierarchy The project helps explain the inadequacy of unconscious bias training and other current approaches to take on workplace inequities Racial inequality in the workforce is not just a matter of racial bias To more fully understand and address the dynamics that so consistently undermine equality and inclusiveness in elite firms and other employment contexts we must look beyond bias to a broader set of challenges

The Company We Keep Grace Kao, Kara Joyner, Kelly Stamper Balistreri, 2019-10-24 With hate crimes on the rise and social movements like Black Lives Matter bringing increased attention to the issue of police brutality the American public continues to be divided by issues of race How do adolescents and young adults form friendships and romantic relationships that bridge the racial divide In The Company We Keep sociologists Grace Kao Kara Joyner and Kelly Stamper Balistreri examine how race gender socioeconomic status and other factors affect the formation of interracial friendships and romantic relationships among youth They highlight two factors that increase the likelihood of interracial romantic relationships in young adulthood attending a diverse school and having an interracial friendship or romance in adolescence While research on interracial social ties has often focused on whites and blacks Hispanics are the largest minority group and Asian Americans are the fastest growing racial group in the United States The Company We Keep examines friendships and romantic relationships among blacks whites Hispanics and Asian Americans to better understand the full spectrum of contemporary race relations Using data from the National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent to Adult Health the authors explore the social ties of more than 15 000 individuals from their first survey responses as middle and high school students in the mid 1990s through young adulthood nearly fifteen years later They find that while approval for interracial marriages has increased and is nearly universal among young people interracial friendships and romantic relationships remain relatively rare especially for whites and blacks Black women are particularly disadvantaged in forming interracial romantic relationships while Asian men are disadvantaged in the formation of any romantic relationships both as adolescents and as young adults They also find that people in same sex romantic relationships are more likely to have partners from a different racial group than are people in different sex relationships The authors pay close attention to how the formation of interracial friendships and romantic relationships depends on opportunities for interracial contact They find that the number of students choosing different race friends and romantic partners is greater in schools that are more racially diverse indicating that school segregation has a profound impact on young people's social ties Kao Joyner and Balistreri analyze the ways school diversity and adolescent interracial contact intersect to lay the groundwork for interracial relationships in young adulthood The Company We Keep provides compelling insights and hope for the future of living and loving across racial divides
