

Step 14 - By deflating in this manner it is easier to glue the crown you made in Step 6 to the top of the balloon. This crown covers any mismatched gores. It also reinforces the balloon and helps slow the cooling of the air in the envelope.

Tip - fold the crown in half and then in half again. The creases will cross in the center of the crown. Glue along the creases and around the perimeter of the crown then apply it to the center of the top of the deflated balloon.

Step 15 -Tape a small loop of string to the top of the balloon to provide a handhold while inflating the balloon.

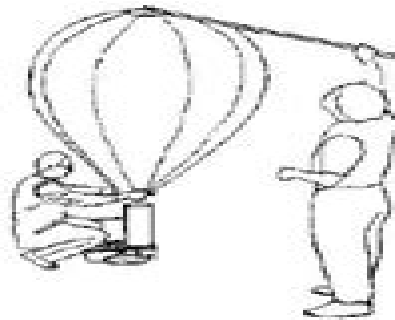

YOUR TISSUE PAPER HOT AIR BALLOON IS NOW READY TO LAUNCH!

Launching

Hot air balloons fly best on still, cool mornings. You must have a large space to launch your balloon because, like the real thing, it is at the mercy of the wind, except that there is no one controlling it.

The balloon in these plans rarely goes above the top of houses and usually flies about 50 yards. This size balloon can also be flown indoors. Larger balloons, like the 8-foot balloon in Brian Queen's article, can fly for miles. The danger is that it may come down on a busy street or freeway or get caught in power lines. Choose an open field and only fly the balloon in very light wind.

To fill the balloon, support the crown using the loop of kite string. Use a hair dryer or heat gun to fill the balloon. For even better performance outdoors place a stovepipe over a lit camp stove and lower the neck of the balloon over the stovepipe. Wear a pair of leather gloves when using the camp stove. Fill the balloon with hot air until a distinct upward pull is felt. Then let go and it will quickly ascend.
