Religion, Psychopathology and Coping, 2023-09-20 ISBN 9042001011 paperback NLG 45 00 From the contents Mental health and religion a theoretical survey M H F van Uden and J Z T Pieper Religion as psychopathology exploring a metaphor Benjamin Beit Hallahmi A model of sequential development of religious orientation Pawel Socha Religious contributions to the process of coping with stress Kenneth I Pargament

Religion and Coping in Mental Health Care Joseph Pieper, Marinus van Uden, 2005 Joseph Pieper and Marinus van Uden have proposed a book consisting of previously published papers on the topics of religion coping and mental health care It covers quite a bit of territory the complex relationships between religion and mental health surveys that present the views of therapists and patients about the interface between religion and mental health a case study of a religious patient struggling with psychological problems empirical studies of religious coping among various groups and a method for teaching the clinical psychology of religion Although the papers are diverse they are unified by several themes First the papers convey a balanced approach to religion and psychology They speak to the potentially positive and negative contributions religion can make to health and well being Second several of the papers focus on the role of religious coping among patients in the Netherlands This focus is noteworthy since the large majority of this theory and research has been limited to the USA Third they underscore the value of a cross cultural approach to the field Their surveys point to the importance of religious worldview perspectives to many patients and therapists in the Netherlands even though the culture is more secularised than the USA However their papers also suggest that the manifestation of these religious worldview perspectives may take different shape in the Netherlands Fourth the papers have clinical relevance The case history of the obsessive compulsive patient by Van Uden ch 4 contains an excellent example of the way in which religious resources can be accessed to counter dysfunctional behaviours This volume shows initial effort in a newly emerging area of study It is encouraging to see a significant body of research and practice on the psychology of religion and coping coming out of the Netherlands It could stimulate further advances in a more cross culturally sensitive clinical psychology of religion Kenneth Pargament Professor of Psychology at Bowling Green State University in Ohio USA Dr Joseph Z T Pieper 1953 works as an assistant professor in psychology of religion and pastoral psychology at the Department of Theology at Utrecht University and at the Catholic Theological University Utrecht the Netherlands Prof dr Marinus H F van Uden 1952 works as a professor in clinical psychology of religion at Tilburg University and Radboud University Nijmegen the Netherlands and he is a licensed clinical psychologist and psychotherapist
