The Sustainable Management Of Commonland:

Contested Common Land Christopher P. Rodgers, Eleanor Straughton, Angus J.L. Winchester, Margherita Pieraccini, 2012-08-06 This innovative and interdisciplinary book makes a major contribution to common pool resource studies. It offers a new perspective on the sustainable governance of common resources grounded in contemporary and archival research on the common lands of England and Wales, an important common resource with multiple and often conflicting uses. It encompasses ecologically sensitive environments and landscapes, is an important agricultural resource and provides public access to the countryside for recreation. Contested Common Land brings together historical and contemporary legal scholarship to examine the environmental governance of common land from c 1600 to the present day. It uses four case studies to illustrate the challenges presented by the sustainable management of common property from an interdisciplinary perspective: the Lake District, Yorkshire Dales, North Norfolk coast and the Cambrian Mountains. These demonstrate that cultural assumptions concerning the value of common land have changed across the centuries with profound consequences for the law, land management, the legal expression of concepts of common property rights and their exercise. The stakeholders of today are the inheritors of this complex cultural legacy and must negotiate diverse and sometimes conflicting objectives in their pursuit of a potentially unifying goal: a secure and sustainable future for the commons. The book also has considerable contemporary relevance, providing a timely contribution to discussion of strategies for the implementation of the Commons Act of 2006. The case studies position the new legislation in England and Wales within the wider context of institutional scholarship on the governance principles for successful common pool resource management and the rejection of the tragedy of the commons.

Environmental Law Elizabeth Fisher, Bettina Lange, Eloise Scotford, 2019 Environmental Law: Text, Cases and Materials offers a comprehensive critical and case-focused approach to the subject, combining insightful author commentary with carefully selected extracts to fully support students.

Common Land in Britain Angus J. L. Winchester, 2022 The first authoritative survey of the history of common land in Great Britain from the medieval period to present day. More than a million hectares of Britain has the status of common land, most of it consisting of semi-natural environments of mountain moorland, wetland or heath. Formerly much more extensive, common land was and in many places remains an integral part of the pastoral economy. Even where it is no longer used by farmers, it plays an increasingly important role in modern life as recreational space and for its value for nature conservation. This book provides for the first time an authoritative survey of the history of common land across all three nations of Great Britain from medieval times to the present day. It charts how commons have been viewed and valued across the centuries, how they have been used and how their vegetation has changed, highlighting parallels and differences between the histories of common land in England, Scotland and Wales. It traces the distinctive legal status of common land and the management regimes which regulated the exercise of common rights, considers the role of commons as spaces for communal gatherings and as a resource.

for the poor charts the loss of common land but also its persistence during the era of enclosure in the century 1760 1860 and explores the changing conceptions of the value and right use of commons since the nineteenth century and the impact this has had on their ecological character Eight case studies of individual commons illustrate the richness of common landscapes and their history at local level They include crofters common grazings in Sutherland mountain commons in the Lake District and Snowdonia lowland commons in Co Durham Herefordshire and the New Forest turbary allotments in Lincolnshire and the urban commons of Wimbledon and Putney Heath

Exploring the Boundaries of Landscape Architecture Simon Bell, Ingrid Herlin, Richard Stiles, 2011-02-20 What have cultural anthropologists historical geographers landscape ecologists and environmental artists got in common Along with eight other disciplines from domains as diverse as planning and design the arts and humanities as well as the social and natural sciences they are all fields of importance to the theory and practice of landscape architecture In the context of the EU funded LE NOTRE Project carried out under the auspices of ECLAS the European Council of Landscape Architecture Schools international experts from a wide range of related fields were asked to reflect each from their own perspective on the interface between their discipline and landscape architecture The resulting insights presented in this book represent an important contribution to the development the discipline of landscape architecture as well as suggesting new ways in which future collaboration can help to create a greater interdisciplinary richness at a time when the awareness of the importance of the landscape is growing across a wide range of disciplines Exploring the Boundaries of Landscape Architecture is the first systematic attempt to explore the territory at the boundaries of landscape architecture It addresses academics professionals and students not just from landscape architecture but also from its neighbouring discipline all of whom will benefit from a better understanding their areas of shared interest and the chance to develop a common language with which to converse Traditional Forest-related Knowledge and Sustainable Forest Management in Africa John A. Parrotta, 2009 The Management of Common Land in North West Europe, C. 1500-1850 Martina de Moor, Leigh Shaw-Taylor, Paul Warde, 2002 Until the 19th century very large areas of Western Europe were subject to some degree to common rights where individual users collectively managed resources such as pasture and wood which were central to the agrarian economy Much scholarship has focused on the dissolution of these rights and the effects of the enclosure of common land on society and agricultural productivity In contrast this volume seeks to assess in a comparative framework the long term management of the common lands and the relative success of strategies in providing the resources sought by the rural population Chapters covering northern and southern England France the Netherlands Flanders Sweden and northern and southern Germany examine the institutional and legal framework of commoning the resources available and their value the sustainability of practices and policies of inclusion and exclusion among the group of commoners Building on the theoretical insights of recent works on commonly managed resources this volume the result of an international collaboration in the CORN network provides a series of detailed historical studies and is the first major work to address this central aspect of the agrarian economy in a comparative European context

Integral Green Slovenia Darja Piciga, Alexander Schieffer, Ronnie Lessem, 2016-06-03 Ronnie Lessem and Alexander Schieffer s Integral Green Society and Economy series has three overarching aims The first is to link together two major movements of our time one philosophical the other practical The philosophical movement is towards what many today are calling an integral age while the practical is the green movement duly aligned with that of sustainable development The second is to blend together elements of nature and community culture and spirituality science and technology politics and economics thus serving to bring about an integral green vision albeit with a focus on business and economics As such the authors transcend the limitations to sustainable development and environmental economics which are overly ecological if not also technological in orientation and exclude social and cultural elements Thirdly this particular volume with Darja Piciga focuses specifically on Slovenia as well as on Europe generally drawing on the particular issues and capacities that this country and continent represents particularly for sustainable development and social knowledge based economy The emphasis on Slovenia arose not only because it lies at the heart of Europe but because a specific movement for an Integral Green Slovenian Society and Economy has been co evolved there by the three editors in conjunction with Slovene organisations communities and movements with a view to integrating existing and emerging knowledge resources initiatives and practices into a model as an alternative to austerity for Slovenia and other European countries

The End of Tradition? Ian D. Rotherham, 2014 The threats from global cultural change and abandonment of traditional landscape management increased in the last half of the twentieth century and ten years into the twenty first century show no signs of slowing down Their impacts on global biodiversity and on people disconnected from their traditional landscapes pose real and serious economic and social problems which need to be addressed now The End of Tradition conference held in Sheffield UK was organised by Ian D Rotherham and colleagues It addressed the fundamental issues of whether we can conserve the biodiversity of wonderful and iconic landscapes and reconnect people to their natural environment And if we can how can we do so and make them relevant for the twenty first century The book is in two parts Part 1 A History of Commons and Commons Management and Part 2 Commons Current Management and Problems

The Public Value of the Humanities Jonathan Bate, 2011-01-27 This book is available as open access through the Bloomsbury Open Access programme and is available on www.bloomsburycollections.com

Recession is a time for asking fundamental questions about value At a time when governments are being forced to make swingeing savings in public expenditure why should they continue to invest public money funding research into ancient Greek tragedy literary value philosophical conundrums or the aesthetics of design Does such research deliver value for money and public benefit Such questions have become especially pertinent in the UK in recent years in the context of the drive by government to instrumentalize research across the disciplines and the prominence of discussions about economic impact and knowledge transfer In this book a group of distinguished humanities researchers all working in Britain but publishing research of international importance reflect on the public value of their discipline using particular research projects as case studies Their essays are passionate sometimes polemical often witty and consistently thought provoking covering a range of humanities disciplines from theology to architecture and from media studies to anthropology

How to Save Our Town Centres Dobson, Julian,2015-02-18 Has the age of the internet killed our high streets Have our town and city centres become obsolete How to Save Our Town Centres delves below the surface of empty buildings and shop local campaigns to focus on the real issues how the relationship between people and places is changing how business is done and who benefits and how the use and ownership of land affects us all Written in an engaging and accessible style and illustrated with numerous original interviews the book sets out a comprehensive and coherent agenda for long term citizen led change It will be a valuable resource for policymakers and researchers in planning architecture and the built environment economic development and community participation

The Landscapes of Common Land Tom Williamson,2025-10-31 Explores the history ecology and physical features of English commons focusing on Norfolk s landscapes Commons are an important part of the English landscape Survivors from a once more extensive network otherwise eroded by the inexorable progress of enclosure they provide a taste of wildness crucial habitats for wildlife and valued spaces for recreation To many people they seem to offer a tangible link with happier more egalitarian times when communities controlled the land or with periods yet more remote representing fragments of the wilderness of remote prehistory But commons are shrouded in misunderstanding and myth They were shaped by local societies that were highly hierarchical in character and always embedded in inequalities of property and power Their ecology moulded by centuries of intensive exploitation followed in most cases by a long period of dereliction has only a tangential connection with the truly natural habitats of the deep past And a surprising number of our legally recognised commons are not in reality common land at all This innovative study which concentrates on the county of Norfolk but ranges widely is firmly focused on the character of commons as physical environments and places as landscapes Using a wide range of documentary archaeological and ecological evidence it discusses the development and management of commons from earliest times explains their morphology location and distribution and explores why some examples survived the process of enclosure and the distinctive traces left by those that did not Above all it describes the characteristic physical features of different kinds of common and explains how their ecology has in innumerable ways been shaped by history Highly readable and copiously illustrated this book will appeal to all with an interest in the English rural landscape and will be essential reading for those with a particular enthusiasm for common land

Ecological Relations Susan Board,2003-08-29 International relations IR traditionally theorises the social relationships between different peoples In so doing it ignores the ecological bases to life the ground upon which we walk the all encompassing bind of nature In the current climate of environmental degradation international relations as a theory must in turn be altered By broadening the term relations to include this ecological framework international relations can be approached from a changed perspective In this book Susan

Board uses a Foucauldian model of power to expand the boundaries of international relations She argues that relations can include other people or animals and are not exclusively between states Such a perspective acts to denaturalise the marginalization of women animals and indigenous peoples and hence expand the constrained discipline of IR By rethinking international relations to put ecological foundations first we are pushed to think and act with consideration of the long term sustainability of the global environment an ecological focus reminds us of our interdependence with our environment and all our neighbours The book raises conceptual and methodological issues that go directly to the heart of current critical engagements within the discipline of IR As such it will be of great interest to students and researchers in IR environmental politics and political theory Parliamentary Debates (Hansard). Great Britain.
