Thinking Animals Why Animal Studies Now:

Thinking Animals Kari Weil, 2012-05-01 Kari Weil provides a critical introduction to the field of animal studies as well as an appreciation of its thrilling acts of destabilization Examining real and imagined confrontations between human and nonhuman animals she charts the presumed lines of difference between human beings and other species and the personal ethical and political implications of those boundaries Weil's considerations recast the work of such authors as Kafka Mann Woolf and Coetzee and such philosophers as Nietzsche Heidegger Derrida Deleuze Agamben Cixous and Hearne while incorporating the aesthetic perspectives of such visual artists as Bill Viola Frank Noelker and Sam Taylor Wood and the visual thinking of the autistic animal scientist Temple Grandin She addresses theories of pet keeping and domestication the importance of animal agency the intersection of animal studies disability studies and ethics and the role of gender shame love and grief in shaping our attitudes toward animals Exposing humanism's conception of the human as a biased illusion and embracing posthumanism's acceptance of human and animal entanglement Weil unseats the comfortable assumptions of humanist thought and its species specific distinctions 1970s critical animal studies is now taking shape as a wide open multidisciplinary endeavor through which scholars across the humanities sciences and social sciences and others ranging from creative writers to architects are joining together to address issues related to today's unprecedented subjection of animals. Introducing this emerging field, Dawne McCance describes the wide range of analysis and approaches represented, looking at much debated practices such as industrialized or factory farming of animals, handling and slaughter, animal experimentation, wildlife management, animal captivity, global genomics, meat eating, and animal sacrifice. McCance equally focuses on many of the theoretical and ethical problems that recur across the field, raising critical questions about prevailing approaches to animal ethics and inviting new ways of thinking about and responding to animals.
