

Tradition and the Individual Talent Summary

"Tradition and the Individual Talent" by T. S. Eliot is a 1919 critical essay about the relationship between the individual poet or author and the canon of literature that precedes the poet.

- Eliot argues that great poets are not simply original but are in conversation with the literary tradition.
- Eliot also suggests that the poet's role is not to express personal emotion but rather to serve as a medium for the collective emotions of the "mind of Europe."

Introduction

T. S. Eliot's 1919 critical essay "Tradition and the Individual Talent" was first published in the London literary magazine The Egoist. It was republished a year later, alongside nineteen of Eliot's other essays, in the 1920 collection The Sacred Wood. Though "Tradition and the Individual Talent" was composed early in Eliot's career, it remains one of his best-known and most influential essays, having contributed heavily to the founding of the New Criticism movement. New Criticism practices close reading and emphasizes the aesthetic and stylistic elements of poetry rather than the ideological or biographical ones. In "Tradition and the Individual Talent," Eliot advocates for the separation of art from artist and argues that tradition has less to do with imitation and more to do with understanding and expanding upon the intellectual and literary context in which one is writing. The essay is divided into three sections, with the first section outlining Eliot's definition of tradition, the second expanding upon the relationship between poetry and the poet, and the third offering a brief conclusion.

Summary

In part 1, Eliot articulates his concept of literary tradition. He argues that often what marks great poetry is the degree to which it is in conversation with the poetry of the past. In his view, to be "traditional" is not to lack originality, but rather to possess an awareness of the "whole of the literature
