Without Anesthesia A Novel:

Without Anesthesia Pedram Navab, 2014-12-22 Vivid grotesque and whip smart Rosalind Galt Dear Tess we cut you up today So ends and begins the disturbing and provocative story of Tess a third year medical student whose compulsive desire to feel her patients pain leads her to destruct her own body by methods both horrific and creative In this highly original medical thriller Tess's narrative intersects with similarly obsessive characters and the distinctions between fiction and reality between art and medicine are called into question Without Anesthesia spans time periods and settings from 1920 s Hollywood to late 1990 s New York and culminates in an ending that Alfred Hitchcock himself would approve Without Anesthesia is an original sobering and haunting visceral contemplation of love anguish morbidity obsession knowing and unknowability the seen and the felt The intense desire for intimacy and communion on the part of characters and readers evokes riveting anticipation and obsessive page turning anxiety Mariam Beevi Lam author of Precariat Reckoning Viet Nam Post Trauma and Strategic Affect Take Without Anesthesia straight if you can personally I required a few shots of whiskey But layered into this hallucinatory medical nightmare is a moving meditation on obsession and loss Equally adept at slow burning suspense and blindside revelation Navab will keep you transfixed whether you're numbed or not Lisa Lutz author of The Spellman Files winner of the Alex Award Without Anesthesia mobilizes an astoundingly rich and varied body of discourses film theory philosophies of aesthetics medical sciences ranging from psychiatry to cardiology even a history of excrement deploying them in ways that transform our ideas about what the detective narrative is and what it might become in the future Without Anesthesia gives us what has long been beloved about the most conventional rewarding and best of mystery novels the desire to stay up late into the night and read so as to solve a puzzle that seems at turns within our grasp and then suddenly once again beyond it Nicole Rizzuto Assistant Professor of Comparative Literature Georgetown University Without Anesthesia is a vivid grotesque and whip smart play with identity where the simulations of appearance merge with the materialities of the body Navab immerses the reader in the rich vocabularies of medicine and cinema which is to say the languages of the body's beauty and decay our obsessions and repulsions life and death Rosalind Galt author of Pretty Film and the Decorative Image and The New European Cinema Redrawing the Map

Novel Beginnings Patricia Meyer Spacks, 2008-10-01 In this study intended for general readers eminent critic Patricia Meyer Spacks provides a fresh engaging account of the early history of the English novel Novel Beginnings departs from the traditional narrow focus on the development of the realistic novel to emphasize the many kinds of experimentation that marked the genre in the eighteenth century before its conventions were firmly established in the nineteenth Treating well known works like Tom Jones and Tristram Shandy in conjunction with less familiar texts such as Sarah Fielding's The Cry a kind of hybrid novel and play and Jane Barker's A Patch Work Screen for the Ladies a novel of adventure replete with sentimental verse and numerous subnarratives the book evokes the excitement of a multifaceted and unpredictable process of growth and change Investigating fiction throughout the 1700s Spacks delineates the individuality of specific texts while suggesting connections among novels She sketches a wide range of forms and themes including Providential narratives psychological thrillers romances clever sentimental parables political allegories Gothic romances and many others These multiple narrative experiments show the impossibility of thinking of eighteenth century fiction simply as a precursor to the nineteenth century novel Spacks shows Instead the vast variety of engagements with the problems of creating fiction demonstrates that literary history by no means inexorable might have taken quite a different course

Fiction and Cultures of Human Extinction Sarah E. McFarland,2021-01-28 This work analyzes 21st century realistic speculations of human extinction fictions that imagine future worlds without interventions of as yet uninvented technology interplanetary travel or other science fiction elements that provide hope for rescue or long term survival Climate change fiction as a genre of apocalyptic and post apocalyptic writing usually resists facing the potentiality of human species extinction following instead traditional generic conventions that imagine primitivist communities of human survivors with the means of escaping the consequences of global climate change Yet amidst the ongoing sixth great extinction works that problematize survival provide no opportunities for social rebirth and speculate humanity's final end may address the problem of how to reject the impulse of human exceptionalism that pervades climate change discourse and post apocalyptic fiction Rather than following the preferences of the genre the ecocollapse fictions examined here manifest apocalypse where the means for a happy ending no longer exists In these texts diminished ecosystems specters of cannibalism and disintegrations of difference and othering render human self identity as radically malleable within their confrontations with the stark materiality of all life This book is the first in depth exploration of contemporary fictions that imagine the imbrication of human and nonhuman within global species extinctions It closely interrogates novels from authors like Peter Heller Cormac McCarthy and Yann Martel that reject the impulse of human exceptionalism to demonstrate what it might be like to go extinct
