Policy Legitimacy, Science and Political Authority Michael Heazle, John Kane, 2015-10-05 Voters expect their elected representatives to pursue good policy and presume this will be securely founded on the best available knowledge Yet when representatives emphasize their reliance on expert knowledge they seem to defer to people whose authority derives not politically from the sovereign people but from the presumed objective status of their disciplinary bases This book examines the tensions between political authority and expert authority in the formation of public policy in liberal democracies It aims to illustrate and better understand the nature of these tensions rather than to argue specific ways of resolving them The various chapters explore the complexity of interaction between the two forms of authority in different policy domains in order to identify both common elements and differences The policy domains covered include climate geoengineering discourses environmental health biotechnology nuclear power whaling economic management and the use of force This volume will appeal to researchers and to convenors of post graduate courses in the fields of policy studies foreign policy decision making political science environmental studies democratic system studies and science policy studies

Norms, Interests, and Power in Japanese Foreign Policy Y. Sato, 2008-10-13 This edited volume puts forth a theoretically and empirically rigorous analysis of Japanese foreign policy Nine case studies on Japan's security economic and environmental policies in this volume examine how norms do or do not guide Japanese foreign policy and how they interact with interests and power Whales and Elephants in International Conservation Law and Politics Ed Couzens, 2013-11-07 Whales and elephants are iconic giants of the marine and terrestrial animal world Both are conspicuous representatives of wildlife conservation The issues of whaling and the ivory trade are closely linked both legally and politically in many ways some obvious and some surprising The treatment of both whales and elephants will be politically and legally contentious for years to come and is of great significance to conservation in general This book examines the current state of international environmental law and wildlife conservation through a comparative analysis of the treatment of whales and elephants In particular it describes the separate histories of international governance of both whales and elephants presenting the various treaties through which conservation has been implemented It is shown that international environmental law is influenced and shaped by important political actors many with opposing views on how best conservation and sustainable development principles are to be implemented Modern environmental treaties are changing as weaknesses and loopholes are exposed in older and possibly outdated treaties such as the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and

Flora CITES and the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling ICRW Such weaknesses can be seen in the efforts made by some states to circumvent or weaken CITES and the International Whaling Commission and to resume commercial whaling and further in the efforts of countries to resume trade in ivory The argument is made that the Convention on Biological Diversity could be used to begin reconciling opposed views and to focus conservation efforts The argument is made that effective conservation of species cannot be achieved through individual treaties but only through a synergistic approach involving multilateral environmental agreements ecosystems of legal instruments New Zealand Yearbook of International Law ,2020-05-18 The New Zealand Yearbook of International Law is an annual internationally refereed publication intended to stand as a reference point for legal materials and critical commentary on issues of international law The Yearbook also serves as a valuable tool in the determination of trends state practice and policies in the development of international law in New Zealand the Pacific region the Southern Ocean and Antarctica and to generate scholarship in those fields In this regard the Yearbook contains an annual Year in Review of developments in international law of particular interest to New Zealand as well as a dedicated section on the South Pacific This Yearbook covers the period 1 January 2018 to 31 December 2018 Encyclopedia of the Arctic Mark Nuttall,2005-09-23 With detailed essays on the Arctic s environment wildlife climate history exploration resources economics politics indigenous cultures and languages conservation initiatives and more this Encyclopedia is the only major work and comprehensive reference on this vast complex changing and increasingly important part of the globe Including 305 maps This Encyclopedia is not only an interdisciplinary work of reference for all those involved in teaching or researching Arctic issues but a fascinating and comprehensive resource for residents of the Arctic and all those concerned with global environmental issues sustainability science and human interactions with the environment NGO Diplomacy Michele M. Betsill, Elisabeth Corell,2007-10-05 Provides an analytical framework for assessing the impact of NGOs on intergovernmental negotiations on the environment and identifying the factors that determine the degree of NGO influence with case studies that apply the framework to negotiations on climate change biosafety desertification whaling and forests Over the past thirty years nongovernmental organizations NGOs have played an increasingly influential role in international negotiations particularly on environmental issues NGO diplomacy has become in the words of one organizer an international experiment in democratizing intergovernmental decision making But there has been little attempt to determine the conditions under which NGOs make a difference in either the process or the outcome of international negotiations This book presents an analytic framework for the systematic and comparative study of NGO diplomacy in international environmental negotiations Chapters by experts on international environmental policy apply this framework to assess the effect of NGO diplomacy on specific negotiations on environmental and sustainability issues The proposed analytical framework offers researchers the tools with which to assess whether and how NGO diplomats affect negotiation processes outcomes or both and through comparative analysis the book identifies factors that explain variation in NGO influence including coordination of strategy degree of access institutional overlap and alliances with key states The empirical chapters use the framework to evaluate the degree of NGO influence on the first phase of the Kyoto Protocol negotiations on global climate change the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification negotiations within the International Whaling Commission that resulted in new management procedures and a ban on commercial whaling and international negotiations on forests involving the United Nations the International Tropical Timber Organization and the World Trade Organization Contributors Steinar Andresen Michele M Betsill Stanley W Burgiel Elisabeth Corell David Humphreys Tora Skodvin
