

Z Force

- 6.27. Clamp the fingers on the return-to-neutral mechanism so that they hold the tab on the control quadrant to the tab on the indexing plate. See Figure 6.27.

NOTE: This will effectively lock the return-to-neutral mechanism positively into neutral.

- 6.28. Rotate the steering link rod to lengthen or shorten it until the lap bar is centered in the notch at the neutral position.
- 6.29. Tighten the jam nuts on the steering link rod to lock-in the adjustment.
- 6.30. Remove the clamp.
- 6.31. Repeat the procedure on the second IHT if necessary.
- 6.32. Lower the Z-Force to the ground and test-run it in a safe area.
- 6.33. With the lap bars pushed forward or pulled back an equal amount, the Z-Force mower should track straight.
- 6.34. After the steering link rods are adjusted, set the lap bar stop bolts.
- 6.35. Loosen the jam nuts on both lap bar stop bolts.

- 6.36. With the engine turned off, push each lap bar gently forward until it reaches the end of the travel allowed by the return-to-neutral mechanism. See Figure 6.36.

- 6.37. If there is a difference in the travel of the two lap bars, adjust the stop bolt on the lap bar with the least travel so that it just contacts steering pivot bracket as the lap bar reaches the end of its travel.
- 6.38. Adjust the second lap bar so that it matches the first.

NOTE: If the mower does not track straight after these adjustments are complete, particularly on a slight grade, internal wear of the transmission on the side that it tends to track toward may be the cause.

NOTE: For the first two years of residential use, or one year of commercial use, the IHTs are within their warranty period, and will be replaced as complete units if a warrantable failure occurs. Beyond the warranty period, complete service procedures for the Hydro-Gear 31-2400 IHT are outlined in Hydro-Gear publication: BLN-51134.

NOTE: Replacement IHTs are shipped dry because of ICC regulations. Prior to installation, they must be filled with 79 fl.oz. or 20W50 motor oil. When properly filled, the level should reach a point 1 7/8" down from the TOP of the transmission housing.
