Keeping with an evolving field with regard to advancements in diagnosis management and follow up is of paramount importance in providing up to date patient care. This implies that there is need of a continuous update of medical literature. It is therefore our belief that care providers in every discipline should contribute to maintaining and updating the medical literature in their respective field of expertise. Contributing to medical literature is the first step in creating medical evidence. This in our eyes should not be a privilege reserved for selected experts. With this in mind we are inviting you to participate in the upcoming special issue on colorectal surgery.
