Victoria Knut Hamsun:

Victoria Knut Hamsun, 2005-11-29 The Nobel Prize winner's poetic psychologically intense portrayal of love's predicament in a class-bound society. A Penguin Classic. Set in a coastal village of late nineteenth-century Norway, Victoria follows two lovers whose yearnings are as powerful as the circumstances that conspire to thwart their romance. Johannes, a miller's son turned poet, finds inspiration for his writing in his passionate devotion to Victoria, a daughter of the impoverished lord of the manor who feels constrained by family loyalty to accept the wealthy young man of her father's choice. Separated by class barriers and social pressure, the fated duo hurt and enthrall each other by turns as they move toward an emotional doom that neither will recognize until it is too late. For more than seventy years, Penguin has been the leading publisher of classic literature in the English-speaking world. With more than 1,800 titles, Penguin Classics represents a global bookshelf of the best works throughout history and across genres and disciplines. Readers trust the series to provide authoritative texts enhanced by introductions and notes by distinguished scholars and contemporary authors, as well as up-to-date translations by award-winning translators.

Victoria Knut Hamsun, 1922 Victoria Knut Hamsun, 1923 Victoria: A Love Story Knut Hamsun, 1902-01-01 The Miller's son walked in thought. He was a big lad of fourteen, tanned by sun and wind, and full of all manner of ideas. When he grew up, he would go to work in a match factory. It was so jolly and dangerous, he might get his fingers covered with sulphur so that nobody would dare shake hands with him. He would be thought a lot of by his chums on account of his lurid trade. He looked about in the wood for his birds. For he knew them all, knew where their nests were, understood their cries, and had different calls to answer them. More than once he had given them dough balls made of flour from his father's mill. All these trees along the path were good friends of his. In spring, he had drawn their sap, and in winter had been a little father to them, freeing them of snow and helping them to hold up their boughs. And even up in the abandoned granite quarry, there wasn't a stone that was a stranger to him; he had cut letters and signs on them and set them up, arranged them like a congregation around their parson. All kinds of strange things happened in that old granite quarry. He turned off and came down to the mill dam. The mill was at work, an immense and ponderous noise surrounded him. He was in the habit of wandering about here, talking to himself aloud. Every bead of foam seemed to have a little life to talk about, and over by the sluice the water fell straight down and looked like a shining sheet of stuff hung out to dry. In the pool below the fall, there were fish. He had stood there with his rod many a time. When he grew up, he would be a diver. That was it. Then he would step down into the sea from the deck of a ship and enter strange realms and countries where great and wonderful forests stood swaying, and a castle of coral lay at the bottom. And the Princess beckoned to him from a window and said, 'Come in.' Then he heard his name called. His father stood behind him and shouted, 'Johannes, there's a message for you from the Castle. You're to row the children over to the island.' He went off in a hurry. A new favour and a great one had been vouchsafed to the Miller's son.
