New Directions for Research in L2 Writing S. Ransdell, M.-L. Barbier, 2012-12-06
 GERT RIJLAARSDAM University of Amsterdam Utrecht University the Netherlands Multilingualism is becoming the default in our global world The present day global citizens use different languages in different situations Apart from their mother tongue they learn languages that give them access to other regions nations and worlds In all countries of the European Union for instance at least one foreign language is mandatory in secondary schools Most students are taught English as a foreign language the lingua franca in Europe In large parts of the USA students move from Spanish to English schooling In parts of Canada bilingual education is standard In Catalonia Spain children learn Catalan and Spanish in Hong Kong English and Chinese The smaller the world becomes the more languages are used and learned For writing process research this development into multilingualism entails at least two challenges First of all studying the relation between writing in L1 and L2 provides an opportunity for collaborative studies in different language settings Second the issue of generalization of findings comes to the fore It becomes evident now that we have unjustly neglected this issue in writing process research We have got to ask whether it is feasible to talk about writing processes in general without referring to the language of the written texts and without taking into account the educational and linguistic culture in which these texts originate
