The Evolution of Memory Systems Elisabeth A. Murray, Steven P. Wise, Kim S. Graham, 2016-10-27 Current theories about human memory have been shaped by clinical observations and animal experiments This doctrine holds that the medial temporal lobe subserves one memory system for explicit or declarative memories while the basal ganglia subserves a separate memory system for implicit or procedural memories including habits Cortical areas outside the medial temporal lobe are said to function in perception motor control attention or other aspects of executive function but not in memory The Evolution of Memory Systems advances dramatically different ideas on all counts It proposes that several memory systems arose during evolution and that they did so for the same general reason to transcend problems and exploit opportunities encountered by specific ancestors at particular times and places in the distant past Instead of classifying cortical areas in terms of mutually exclusive perception executive or memory functions the authors show that all cortical areas contribute to memory and that they do so in their own ways using specialized neural representations The book also presents a proposal on the evolution of explicit memory According to this idea explicit declarative memory depends on interactions between a phylogenetically ancient navigation system and a representational system that evolved in humans to represent one's self and others As a result people embed representations of themselves into the events they experience and the facts they learn which leads to the perception of participating in events and knowing facts The Evolution of Memory Systems is an important new work for students and researchers in neuroscience psychology and biology

Accessing Conceptual Representations for Speaking

Peter Indefrey, Ian FitzPatrick, 2016-10-31 For speaking words in the lexicon are somehow activated from conceptual representations but we know surprisingly little about how this works precisely Which of the attributes of the concept DOG e.g. BARKS IS WALKED WITH A LEASH CARNIVORE ANIMATE have to be activated in a given situation to be able to select the word dog Are there things we know about dogs that are always activated for naming and others that are only activated in certain contexts or even never To date investigations on lexical access in speaking have largely focused on the effects of distractor nouns on the naming latency of a target noun We have learned that distractors from the same semantic category e.g. cat hinder naming but associatively related distractors may facilitate or hinder naming However associatively related words can have all kinds of semantic relationships to a target word and with few exceptions the effects of specific semantic relationships other than membership in the same category as the target concept have not been systematically investigated This special issue aims at moving forward towards a more detailed account of how precisely conceptual information is used to access the lexicon in speaking and what corresponding format of conceptual representations needs to be assumed
