Families That Work Janet C. Gornick, Marcia K. Meyers, 2003-08-28 Parents around the world grapple with the common challenge of balancing work and child care Despite common problems the industrialized nations have developed dramatically different social and labor market policies policies that vary widely in the level of support they provide for parents and the extent to which they encourage an equal division of labor between parents as they balance work and care In Families That Work Janet Gornick and Marcia Meyers take a close look at the work family policies in the United States and abroad and call for a new and expanded role for the U S government in order to bring this country up to the standards taken for granted in many other Western nations In many countries in Europe and in Canada family leave policies grant parents paid time off to care for their young children and labor market regulations go a long way toward ensuring that work does not overwhelm family obligations In addition early childhood education and care programs guarantee access to high quality care for their children In most of these countries policies encourage gender equality by strengthening mothers ties to employment and encouraging fathers to spend more time caregiving at home In sharp contrast Gornick and Meyers show how in the United States an economy with high labor force participation among both fathers and mothers parents are left to craft private solutions to the society wide dilemma of who will care for the children Parents overwhelmingly mothers must loosen their ties to the workplace to care for their children workers are forced to negotiate with their employers often unsuccessfully for family leave and reduced work schedules and parents must purchase care of dubious quality at high prices from consumer markets By leaving child care solutions up to hard pressed working parents these private solutions exact a high price in terms of gender inequality in the workplace and at home family stress and economic insecurity and not least child well being Gornick and Meyers show that it is possible based on the experiences of other countries to enhance child well being and to increase gender equality by promoting more extensive and egalitarian family leave work time and child care policies Families That Work demonstrates convincingly that the United States has much to learn from policies in Europe and in Canada and that the often repeated claim that the United States is simply too different to draw lessons from other countries is based largely on misperceptions about policies in other countries and about the possibility of policy expansion in the United States
