

home."

Janie made her face laugh after a short pause, but it wasn't too easy. She had never thought of making a speech, and didn't know if she cared to make one at all. It must have been the way Joe spoke out without giving her a chance to say anything one way or another that took the bloom off of things. But anyway, she went down the road behind him that night feeling odd. He strode along invested with his new dignity, thought and planned out loud, unconscious of her thoughts. (Horton 43)

Why is Janie the MOST upset about here? What can we infer about Joe's character?

3. "How come Ah can't go long wid you tuh de draggin'-out?"

Joe was struck speechless for a minute. "Why, Janie! You wouldn't be seen at uh draggin'-out, wouldja? Wid any and everybody in uh posse pushin' and shovin' wid they no-manners selves? Now, now!"

"You would be dere wid me, wouldn't yuh?"

"Dat's right, but Ah'm uh man even if Ah is de Mayor. But de mayor's wife is somethin' different again. Anyhow they's liable tuh need me tuh say uh few words over de carcass, dis bein' uh special case. But you ain't goin' off in all dat mess uh commonness. Ah'm surprised at yuh tuh askin'."

He wiped his lips of ham gravy and put on his hat. "Shut de door behind yuh, Janie. Lum is too busy wid de hawses." After more shouting of advice and orders and useless comments, the town escorted the carcass off. No, the carcass moved off with the town, and left Janie standing in the doorway" (Horton 50).

In this scene, a male has died in the town, and Joe says that Janie can't come to the funeral for the male. Why doesn't he think she should go? What does this passage say about Janie's new identity as "the mayor's wife"?

6. This business of the head-rag irked her endlessly. But Jody was set on it. Her hair was NOT going to show in the store. It didn't seem sensible at all. That was because Joe never told Janie how jealous he was. He never told her how often he had seen the other men figuratively mauling in it as she went about things in the store. And one night he had caught Walter standing behind and brushing the back of his hand back and forth across the loose end of her braid ever so lightly so as to enjoy the feel of it without Janie knowing what he was doing. Joe was at the back of the store and Walter didn't see him. He felt like rushing forth with the meat knife and chopping off the offending hand. That night he ordered Janie to tie up her hair around the store. That was all. She was there in the store for him to look at, not those others. (Horton 53)

What does Janie's hair symbolize? What does its restriction symbolize about her relationship and identity?

How are other men affecting Joe's character?
