Harry Potter theme park attractions Food, Fantasy, and the Spectacle Erin T. Broemel, 2015 Each year over 300 million people visit theme parks making them the major vacation destination worldwide Theme parks are known for their elaborate spectacle the creation of artificial realities through intricate immersive experiences including costumed characters stage shows and extravagant decor Though many aspects of the theme park experience have been reviewed little focus has been given to the role of food in the overall immersion particularly how food extends the spectacle into a fantastical created reality This study examined the function of food within a highly immersive theme park setting and how it contributed to the overall illusion and immersion of the fantasy environment Research was conducted from December 2014 to March 2015 at The Wizarding World of Harry Potter Universal Orlando Resort Themed food served three overarching functions 1 it operated as an experience 2 it functioned as a conduit to authenticity and 3 it extended sensory perceptions Food immersed tourists in the themed experience though visual cues remained the primary sensory stimulus However guests considered the location to be more authentic when coupled with a themed food item as opposed to the generic food choices found in other parks Themed food functions as an extension of the spectacle by maintaining the illusion and contributes to the overall exhibition of the themed space
