

"This is much more than a research guide. It is a compendium and an encyclopedia of theories, philosophies, and experiments in information behavior research conducted over the past four decades or so. The presentations are concise, and many are a delightful read, written by protagonists of that research."

Theory Development in the Information Sciences Diane H. Sonnenwald, 2016-03-08 Emerging as a discipline in the first half of the twentieth century the information sciences study how people groups organizations and governments create share disseminate manage search access evaluate and protect information as well as how different technologies and policies can facilitate and constrain these activities Given the broad span of the information sciences it is perhaps not surprising that there is no consensus regarding its underlying theory the purposes of it the types of it or how one goes about developing new theories to talk about new research questions Diane H Sonnenwald and the contributors to this volume seek to shed light on these issues by sharing reflections on the theory development process These reflections are not meant to revolve around data collection and analysis rather they focus on the struggles challenges successes and excitement of developing theories The particular theories that the contributors explore in their essays range widely from theories of literacy and reading to theories of design and digital search Several chapters engage with theories of the behavior of individuals and groups some deal with processes of evaluation others reflect on questions of design and the rest treat cultural and scientific heritage The ultimate goal Sonnenwald writes in her introduction is to encourage inspire and assist individuals striving to develop and or teach theory development

Subject Access to Information Koraljka Golub, 2014-11-21 Drawing on the research of experts from the fields of computing and library science this ground breaking work will show you how to combine two very different approaches to classification to create more effective user friendly information retrieval systems A much needed analysis of the intersection of information organization and technology this interdisciplinary work encompasses both current and potential methods of organizing information by subject It examines traditional approaches as they are used in the online environment and explores computer science approaches such as ontologies and automated tools for subject information organization. Entries review the advantages and disadvantages of the two approaches, showcase their applications today and project what those applications may be in the future. Content ranges from background on the importance of information organization in general to the importance of information organization by subject in particular. Traditional and modern knowledge organization systems are covered, as are technological standards, selected topics in automated tools and interdisciplinary research and cooperation. By tackling varied approaches, the work provides you with an appreciation of the tools and an understanding of common aims.

Digital Lifeline? Carleen Maitland, 2018-05-04. Interdisciplinary perspectives on the role of new information technologies including mobile phones, wireless networks and biometric identification in the global refugee crisis. Today's global refugee crisis has mobilized humanitarian efforts to help those fleeing persecution and armed conflict at all stages of their journey. Aid organizations are increasingly employing new information technologies in their mission, taking advantage of proliferating mobile phones, remote sensors, wireless networks and biometric identification systems. Digital Lifeline examines the use of these technological innovations by the humanitarian community, exploring operations and systems that range from forecasting refugee flows to providing cellular and Internet connectivity to displaced persons. The contributors, from disciplines as diverse as international law and computer science, offer a variety of perspectives on forced migration, technical development and user behavior, drawing on field work in countries including Jordan, Lebanon, Rwanda, Germany, Greece, the United States and Canada. The chapters consider such topics as the use of information technology in refugee status determination, ethical and legal issues surrounding biometric technologies, information technology within organizational hierarchies, the use of technology by refugees, access issues in refugee camps, the scalability and sustainability of information technology innovations in humanitarian work, geographic information systems and spatial thinking and the use of big data analytic techniques. Finally, the book identifies policy research directions, develops a unified research agenda and offers practical suggestions for conducting displacement research.

Selektion in Informationsintermediären Katharina Leyrer, 2025-03-27

Informationsintermediäre im Internet wie Suchmaschinen und Soziale Netzwerke stehen in der Kritik. Es wird befürchtet, dass ihre selektive personalisierte Informationsauswahl Verzerrungen verursacht und die Autonomie der Nutzer einschränkt. Die Vorauswahl von Informationen durch Intermediäre ist jedoch kein Phänomen der Digitalisierung, sondern wird ebenso durch traditionelle Intermediäre wie journalistische Medienangebote und Bibliotheken vorgenommen. Katharina Leyrer zeigt am Beispiel von Suchmaschinen und Bibliotheken, wie sich die Selektionsregeln in Internet-Intermediären von denen traditioneller Intermediäre unterscheiden. Dabei ordnet sie die Praktiken beider Intermediärstypen aus ethischer Perspektive ein und zeigt auf, wie Suchmaschinen und Bibliotheken so verändert werden können, dass sie gesellschaftliche Werte stärker fördern.
