They Say In Harlan County An Oral History Oxford Oral History Series:

They Say in Harlan County Alessandro Portelli, 2010-11-04 Made famous in the 1976 documentary Harlan County USA this pocket of Appalachian coal country has been home to generations of miners and to some of the most bitter labor battles of the 20th century. It has also produced a rich tradition of protest songs and a wealth of fascinating culture and custom that has remained largely undiscovered by outsiders until now. They Say in Harlan County is not a book about coal miners so much as a dialogue in which more than 150 Harlan County women and men tell the story of their region from pioneer times through the dramatic strikes of the 1930s and 70s up to the present. Alessandro Portelli draws on 25 years of original interviews to take readers into the mines and inside the lives of those who work, suffer and often die in them from black lung, falling rock, suffocation or simply from work that can be literally backbreaking. The book is structured as a vivid montage of all these voices: stoic, outraged, grief-stricken, defiant, skillfully interwoven with documents from archives, newspapers, literary works and the author's own participating and critical voice. Portelli uncovers the whole history and memory of the United States in this one symbolic place through settlement, civil war, slavery, industrialization, immigration, labor conflict, technological change, migration, strip mining, environmental and social crises and resistance. And as hot button issues like mountain top removal and the use of clean coal continue to hit the news, the history of Harlan County, especially as seen through the eyes of those who lived it, is becoming increasingly important. With rare emotional immediacy, gripping narratives and unforgettable characters, They Say in Harlan County tells the real story of a culture, the resilience of its people and the human costs of coal mining.

The ^A Wonder of Their Voices Alan Rosen, 2010-11-04 Arguing that early postwar Holocaust testimony was plentiful and significant in its own right, Rosen highlights the Russian-born American psychologist David Boder, who in 1946 was among the earliest to interview Holocaust survivors in DP camps and as far as we know the first to audio record their testimony. Examining the origins and implications of Boder's project, this study compels a new conceptual and historical understanding of Holocaust testimony.

Masculinities on Clydeside Alison Chand, 2016-07-08 Masculinities on Clydeside explores the experiences of civilian men on Clydeside during the war, using oral history interviews as a means to explore subjectivity and arguing for continuous personal agency through major historical changes. While men in reserved occupations are understood as extensively influenced by imagined discourses, often resulting in feelings of guilt and emasculation, their subjectivities were nonetheless ultimately rooted in their lived and immediate local vicinities and the people and places of their everyday lives. This ultimate relevance of lived existence and the everyday also meant that while wartime relations between men and women were clearly shaped by a range of gender discourses and continually renegotiated, gender boundaries were never fixed or truly separate. The analysis looks at wider subjectivities encompassing national and political identities, class consciousness, religious subjectivities and social activities as well as examining women's experiences of working in reserved occupations in wartime and their interactions with civilian men.
