The Three Cities Trilogy Emile Zola, 2018-01-13 There are from ninety to one hundred characters in the story sick persons pilgrims priests nuns hospitallers nurses and peasants and the book shows Lourdes under every aspect There are the piscinas the processions the Grotto the churches at night the people in the streets It is in one word Lourdes in its entirety In this canvas is worked out a very delicate central intrigue as in Dr Pascal and around this are many little stories or subsidiary plots There is the story of the sick person who gets well of the sick person who is not cured and so on The philosophical idea which pervades the whole book is the idea of human suffering the exhibition of the desperate and despairing sufferers who abandoned by science and by man address themselves to a higher Power in the hope of relief as where parents have a dearly loved daughter dying of consumption who has been given up and for whom nothing remains but death A sudden hope however breaks in upon them supposing that after all there should be a Power greater than that of man higher than that of science They will haste to try this last chance of safety It is the instinctive hankering after the lie which creates human credulity

The Three Cities Trilogy Emile Zola, 2018-05-08 Pierre nodded During the night he had fancied he could recognise the voice of M Vigneron whom the heat doubtless had incommoded However the servant was now thoroughly started and she began to enumerate the other persons whose rooms were reached by the same passage on the left hand there was a priest then a mother with three daughters and then an old married couple whilst on the right lodged another gentleman who was all alone a young lady too who was unaccompanied and then a family party which included five young children The hotel was crowded to its garrets The servants had had to give up their rooms the previous evening and lie in a heap in the washhouse During the night also some camp beds had even been set up on the landings and one honourable ecclesiastic for lack of other accommodation had been obliged to sleep on a billiard table

The Three Cities Trilogy Emile Zola, 2018-05-08 Meantime Madame Vetu was expiring in the adjoining bed They had not dared to take her to the Grotto for fear they should see her die on the way For some little time she had lain there with her eyes closed and Sister Hyacinthe who was watching had beckoned to Madame Desagneaux in order to acquaint her with the bad opinion she had formed of the case Both of them were now leaning over the dying woman observing her with increasing anxiety The mask upon her face had turned more yellow than ever and now looked like a coating of mud her eyes too had become more sunken her lips seemed to have grown thinner and the death rattle had begun a slow pestilential wheezing polluted by the cancer which was finishing its destructive work All at once she raised her eyelids and was seized with fear on beholding those two faces bent over her own Could her death be near that they should thus be gazing at her Immense sadness showed itself in her eyes a despairing regret of life It was not a vehement revolt for she no longer had the strength to struggle but what a frightful fate it was to have left her shop her surroundings and her husband merely to come and die so far away to have braved the abominable torture of such a journey to have prayed both day and night and then instead of having her prayer granted to die when others recovered
