

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

Judicial Branch

WHERE DO THEY MEET TO WORK?

The Judicial Branch is made up of the courts. The Supreme Court is the highest court in the country. The courts decide what the meaning of the law is and whether or not the laws break the Constitution. It has nine Justices, that are chosen by the President.

Where do they meet to work?

Why?

The founding fathers wrote the Constitution. This was to form a government that did not allow one person to have too much power. They decided to separate the power into three branches. Each branch has different jobs that help the country run smoothly. The branches are legislative, executive, and judicial.

How does it work?

Executive Branch

PRESIDENT

The President is the head of the executive branch. The President can sign or veto a law passed and appoint or fire judges. When the President needs advice he has a group of people called the Cabinet. The Vice President is in the Cabinet.

Where do they meet to work?

Legislative Branch

CONGRESS

The US Congress is made up of the House of Representatives and the Senate. It is responsible for writing, passing, and passing laws.

SENATE

There are 100 Senators in the Senate. There are two Senators from each of the 50 states. They serve a term of 6 years.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

There are 435 Representatives in the House. There are 100 Representatives from each of the 50 states. This is based on the number of people in each state. They serve a term of 2 years.

ICT, Public Administration and Democracy in the Coming Decade A.J. Meijer, F. Bannister, M. Thaens, 2013-06-20 The physicist Neils Bohr allegedly wrote that Prediction is very difficult especially about the future Many academics believe that serious scholars should never attempt to write about the future but some awareness of the ways in which the future of e government may evolve is needed if well grounded long term decisions about issues such as infrastructures institutions and educational programs are to be made In addition future oriented research is of the utmost importance for informed public debate about technological developments with far reaching societal implications This book marks the 25th anniversary of the permanent study group on e government of the European Group for Public Administration and the papers here were first presented at their 2012 meeting in Bucharest Romania The invited authors were not asked for rigorous analyses based on systematic empirical research or deeply rooted in a theoretical framework instead they were challenged to write thoughtful and measured but provocative essays about ICT and public administration in the coming decade Their contributions are reflections on the nature of new and emerging technologies in the public sector and their impact on government and on democracy itself The book is divided into three sections the past and present as starting point for thinking about the future of e government imagining the future of government and implications for research and practice The many questions raised by developments in ICT for future public administration are presented in a clear and thought provoking manner and merit more debate This volume represents a departure from the normal run of academic publications It is intended both to provoke academics and administrators to think about questions which will affect all of our futures and to offer a range of creative ideas about how the opportunities presented by technology can be exploited to provide better government and governance The Hidden Crisis in Development Ph Quarles van Ufford,Dirk Kruijt,Theodore E.
