The World of Romance, Being Contributions to the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, 1856 (Classic Reprint) William Morris, 2017-12-25 Excerpt from The World of Romance Being Contributions to the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine 1856. In his last year at Oxford, Morris established, assuming the entire financial responsibility, the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, written almost entirely by himself and his college friends but also numbering Rossetti among its contributors. Like most college ventures, its career was short, ending with its twelfth issue in December 1856. In this magazine, Morris first found his strength as a writer, and though his subsequent literary achievements made him indifferent to this earlier work, its virility and wealth of romantic imagination justify its rescue from oblivion. The article on Amiens, intended originally as the first of a series, is included in this volume as an illustration of Morris's power to clothe things actual with the glamour of Romance. Example in this ebook In this little book Dr Marie Stopes deals with subjects which are generally regarded as too sacred for an entirely frank treatment Some earnest and delicate minds may feel apprehensive that such frankness in details is dangerous because the effect on prurient minds might be to give them food for their morbid fancies It is just such a fear which has been largely responsible for the silence and mystery which have for so long been wrapped round the sacred rites of mating The question now is Has this reticence been carried too far Has it been carried so far that it now tends to defeat its purpose of safeguarding public morals There are many who unhesitatingly answer such questions in the affirmative Their intimate knowledge of human lives compels them to recognise that at least as much harm is done by silence as by speaking out Everything depends on how the matter is presented Those who are shocked at the publication of such a book as this on the ground that it gives material for impure minds to sport with need only reflect that such material is already amply provided in certain comic papers in hosts of inferior novels too often on the stage and film and presented thus in coarse and demoralising guise It can do nothing but good to such minds to meet the facts they are already so familiar with in a totally new light On the other hand there are all the earnest and noble young minds who seek to know what responsibilities they are taking on themselves when they marry and how they may best meet these responsibilities How few of them have more than the vaguest ideas on the subject How few of them know how or where to obtain the help they desire They recoil from the coarse and impure sources of information which are so accessible and they hesitate to approach those they have learned to regard as virtuous and modest realising that from such they will receive so little actual information and that so veiled as to be almost useless Dr Stopes has attempted to meet the need of such seekers and her book will certainly be warmly welcomed by them It is calculated to prevent many of those mistakes which wreck the happiness of countless lovers as soon as they are actually married If it did no more than this it would be valuable indeed But there is an even more important aspect to be considered the effect on the child In all civilised lands there is a growing sense of responsibility towards the young The problems of their physical and mental nurture attract more and more attention day by day Eugenists educationists physicians politicians philanthropists and even ordinary parents discuss and ponder ponder and discuss matters both great and small which have a bearing on the development of the child By common consent the first seven years of life are regarded as the most critical It is during these years that the foundations of the personality to be are laid well and truly or otherwise It is during these years that the deepest and most ineradicable impressions are made in the plastic constitution of the child arresting or developing this or the other instinctive trend and fixing it often for life And it is during these years above all that the parents play the most important role in the inner history of the child s life not so much by anything they directly teach through verbal exhortations warnings or commands as by those subtler influences which are conveyed in gesture tone and facial expression The younger the child the more is it influenced through these more primitive modes of expression and quite as much when they are not directed towards itself but are employed by the parents in their intimate relations with one another in the presence of their apparently unobserving child the infant in its cot the toddling baby by the hearth the little child to all appearance absorbed in its picture book or toy To be continue in this ebook Married Love Marie Carmichael Stopes,1919 The Teaching of English at the Universities English Association,Sir Stanley Mordaunt Leathes,1913
