GRIFFITH,2020-10-29 George Griffith 1857 1906 full name George Chetwynd Griffith Jones was a prolific British science fiction writer and noted explorer who wrote during the late Victorian and Edwardian age Many of his visionary tales appeared in magazines such as Pearson s Magazine and Pearson s Weekly before being published as novels Griffith was extremely popular in the United Kingdom though he failed to find similar acclaim in the United States in part due to his utopian socialist views A journalist rather than a scientist by background what his stories lack in scientific rigour and literary grace they make up for in sheer exuberance of execution The Angel of the Revolution A Tale of the Coming Terror 1893 remains his best and most famous work World Peril Of 1910 George Griffith,2006-08-17 In 1894 the most famous science fiction writer in England was George Griffith His stories introduced an extraordinary array of technological marvels to an appreciative British audience but his novels were almost never published in America Griffith is rarely considered to be in the same league as H G Wells but Wells admired Griffith for his ability to write great high adventure stories while packing them with plausible science and prophetic invention In 1897 Griffith wrote The Great Crellin Comet a short story that introduced the concept that technology could stave off Armageddon and could save humanity from suffering the ignominious fate of the dinosaurs In the process Griffith invented the countdown an eminently practical and dramatic tool that is still used today for space launches In 1905 Griffith expanded this tale into a full fledged novel of science and romance changing its name to The World Peril of 1910 For the first time in over a hundred years these two stories are reproduced here complete and unabridged
