Individual Choice or Policies? Drivers of Female

Employment in Europe Lone Engbo Christiansen, Huidan Lin, Ms. Joana Pereira, Petia Topalova, Rima Turk, 2016-03-07

Female labor force participation has increased markedly in many European countries during the past decades. Nonetheless, participation rates remain low in some economies and a significant gender gap persists in most countries. Using micro level data to control for factors that influence personal choice, we re-examine the determinants of female employment in Europe. The results highlight the importance of positive attitudes towards women working and individual characteristics such as years of education and number of children. However, even after controlling for these factors, policies are also key drivers of female employment.

Maternal Employment and Child Health Yana van der Meulen Rodgers, 2011-01-01 As women's labor force participation has risen around the globe, scholarly and policy discourse on the ramifications of this employment growth has intensified. This book explores the links between maternal employment and child health using an international perspective that is grounded in economic theory and rigorous empirical methods. Women's labor market activity affects child health largely because their paid work raises household income, which strengthens families' abilities to finance healthcare needs and nutritious food; however, time away from children could counteract some of the benefits of higher socioeconomic status that spring from maternal employment. New evidence based on data from nine South and Southeast Asian countries illuminates the potential tradeoff between the benefits and challenges families contend with in the face of women's labor market activity. This book provides new original evidence on links between maternal employment and children's health using data associated with three indicators of children's nutritional status: birth size, stunting, and wasting. Results support the implementation and enforcement of policy interventions that bolster women's advancement in the labor market and reduce undernutrition among children. Scholars, students, policymakers, and all those with an interest in nutritional science, gender economics of the family, or development economics will find the methodology and original results expounded here both useful and informative.

Handbook of the

Chapters cover Culture and the family, Mating markets, Household decisions and intra-household distributions, The economics of fertility, a new era, Families, labor markets and policy, Family background, neighborhoods and intergenerational mobility, The great transition, Kuznets facts for family economists, An institutional perspective on the economics of the family, An economics approach to changing family arrangements, Understanding of inequality and intergenerational mobility Evolution of gender roles within families and across societies The Applied Economics of Labour Mark Taylor, 2014-07-16 This book provides an introduction and overview to seven applied financial studies on the theme of labour The studies cover a wide range of topics from the individual effects of becoming disabled on key aspects of labour market outcomes in Germany to testing whether there is evidence of compression of morbidity using Health and Retirement Study HRS data and analysing the effects of this on the labour supply of older people The studies employ a variety of applied techniques across a range of countries This book was originally published as a special issue of Applied Economics Interdependencies Between Fertility and Women's Labour Supply Anna Matysiak, 2011-06-02 The book explores interlinkages between women's employment and fertility at both a macro and a micro level in EU member states Norway and Switzerland Similarly as many other studies on the topic it refers to the cross country variation in the macro context for explaining cross country differences in women's labour supply and fertility levels However in contrast to other studies which mainly focus on Western Europe it extends the discussion to Central and Eastern European countries Furthermore it looks at the macro context from a multi dimensional perspective indicating its four dimensions as relevant for fertility and women's employment choices economic living standards institutional family policies structural labour market structures and cultural social norms A unique feature of the study is the development of indices that measure the intensity of institutional structural and cultural incompatibilities between women's employment and fertility These indices are used for ranking European countries from the perspective of the country specific conditions for work and family reconciliation A country where these conditions are the worst but where women are additionally perceived as important income providers is picked up for an in depth empirical study of the interrelationship between fertility and women's employment choices Finally against the review of theoretical concepts predominantly used for studying interdependencies between fertility and women's labour supply the book assesses the micro level empirical studies available on the topic and proposes an analytical approach for modelling the two variables Thereby it also contributes to methodological developments in the field Women, Work, and Economic Growth Ms. Kalpana Kochhar, Ms. Sonali Jain-Chandra, Ms. Monique Newiak, 2017-02-15 Women make up a little over half of the world's population but their contribution to measured economic activity and growth is far below its potential Despite significant progress in recent decades labor markets across the world remain divided along gender lines and progress toward gender equality seems to have stalled The challenges of growth job creation and inclusion are closely intertwined This volume brings together key research by IMF economists on issues related to gender and macroeconomics In addition to providing policy prescriptions and case studies from IMF member countries the chapters also look at the gender gap from an economic point of view Growth Effects and the Determinants of Female Employment in Pakistan Shafaq Hussain, 2012 Originally presented as the author's thesis doctoral Ruhr Universit at Bochum 2011
