Nile gleanings Villiers Stuart,1879 Henry Miller Lawrence J. Shifreen,1979 No descriptive material is available for this title The New York Times Index ,2008 Citizen Critics Rosa A. Eberly,2000 The condition of our public discussions about literary and cultural works has much to say about the condition of our democracy and the author argues for more public discourse in classrooms newspapers magazines etc to reclaim a public voice on national artistic matters In this revealing study of the links among literature rhetoric and democracy Rosa A Eberly explores the public debate generated by amateur and professional readers about four controversial literary works two that were censored in the United States and two that created conflict because they were not censored In Citizen Critics Eberly compares the outrage sparked by the publication of James Joyce s Ulysses and Henry Miller s Tropic of Cancer with the relative quiescence that greeted the much more violent and sexually explicit content of Bret Easton Ellis s American Psycho and Andrea Dworkin s Mercy Through a close reading of letters to the editor reviews media coverage and court cases Eberly shows how literary critics and legal experts defused censorship debates by shifting the focus from content to aesthetics and from social values to publicity By asserting their authority to pass judgments thus denying the authority of citizen critics these professionals effectively removed the discussion from literary public spheres A passionate advocate for treating reading as a public and rhetorical enterprise rather than solely as a private one Eberly suggests the potential impact a work of literature may have on the social polity if it is brought into public forums for debate rather than removed to the exclusive rooms of literary criticism Eberly urges educators to use their classrooms as protopublic spaces in which students can learn to make the transition from private reader to public citizen Appleton's New Practical Cyclopedia Marcus Benjamin,Arthur Elmore Bostwick,Gerald Van Casteel,George Jotham Hagar,1910 The American Dictionary and Cyclopedia Robert Hunter,1900 Unpacked Blake C. Scott,2022-11-15 Unpacked offers a critical novel perspective on the Caribbean s now taken for granted desirability as a tourist s paradise Dreams of a tropical vacation have become a quintessential aspect of the modern Caribbean as millions of tourists travel to the region and spend extravagantly to pursue vacation fantasies At the beginning of the twentieth century however travelers from North America and Europe thought of the Caribbean as diseased dangerous and according to many observers the white man s graveyard How then did a trip to the Caribbean become a supposedly fun and safe experience Unpacked examines the historical roots of the region s tourism industry by following a well traveled sea route linking the US East Coast with the island of Cuba and the Isthmus of Panama Blake C Scott describes how the cultural and material history of US imperialism became the heart of modern Caribbean tourism In addition he explores how advances in tropical medicine perceptions of the tropical environment and development of infrastructure and transportation networks opened a new playground for visitors Our Earth and Its Story Robert Brown,1888 Host Bibliographic Record for Boundwith Item Barcode 30112096606865 and Others ,2013 Portraits of the Earth Timothy G. Feeman,2002 Every

map is a tool a product of human effort and creativity that represents some aspects of our world or universe This course was powered by the belief that by exploring the mathematical ideas involved in creating and analyzing maps students would see how mathematics could help them to understand and explain their world from the Preface Portraits of the Earth exemplifies the AMS's mission to bring the power and vitality of mathematical thought to the nonexpert It is designed to teach students to think logically and to analyze the technical information that they so readily encounter every day Maps are exciting visual tools that we encounter on a daily basis from street maps to maps of the world accompanying news stories to geologic maps depicting the underground structure of the earth This book explores the mathematical ideas involved in creating and analyzing maps a topic that is rarely discussed in undergraduate courses It is the first modern book to present the famous problem of mapping the earth in a style that is highly readable and mathematically accessible to most students Feeman's writing is inviting to the novice yet also interesting to readers with more mathematical experience Through the visual context of maps and mapmaking students will see how contemporary mathematics can help them to understand and explain the world Topics explored are the shape and size of the earth basic spherical geometry and why one can't make a perfect flat map of the planet The author discusses different attributes that maps can have and determines mathematically how to design maps that have the desired features The distortions that arise in making world maps are quantitatively analyzed There is an in depth discussion on the design of numerous map projections both historical and contemporary as well as conformal and equal area maps Feeman looks at how basic map designs can be modified to produce maps with any center and he indicates how to generalize methods to produce maps of arbitrary surfaces of revolution Also included are end of chapter exercises and laboratory projects Particularly interesting is a chapter that explains how to use MapleR add on software to make maps from geographic data points This book would make an excellent text for a basic undergraduate mathematics or geography course and would be especially appealing to the teacher who is interested in exciting visual applications in the classroom It would also serve nicely as supplementary reading for a course in calculus linear algebra or differential geometry Prerequisites include a solid grasp of trigonometry and basic calculus R Waterloo Maple Inc Ontario Canada
