The Superhero Response Jeffery Moulton, 2012-09-29 9/11 had a profound effect on America and the world It left deep scars on the New York skyline and our collective psyche And few things show how much we changed more accurately than the stories of our superheroes In the past decade superhero stories have regained national prominence Superman Spider Man Batman and countless others are everywhere you look in books comics movies and even in musicals But while they have the same names and uniforms as before they are very different They have been changed by the terrible events of September 11 They are darker more uncertain more fallible and flawed and more realistic than ever before But perhaps the most interesting thing is what those changes say about us In The Superhero Response author Jeffery Moulton explores how the terrorist attacks changed our superheroes and what those changes say about life in post 9/11 America Filled with engaging analysis and thought provoking questions The Superhero Response is sure to fascinate die hard fans and casual readers alike

War on the Human Konstantinos Blatanis, Theodora Tsimpouki, 2017-05-11 The essays in this collection explore the question of the human both as a contested concept and as it relates to and functions within the wider global conjuncture The authors explore the theoretical underpinnings of the term human inviting the reader to reflect upon the contemporary human condition to identify opportunities and threats in the changes ahead and to determine what aspects of our species we should abandon or strive to maintain The volume approaches these ideas from a myriad of perspectives but the authors are united in their abstention from rejecting humanism outright or indeed fully endorsing posthumanism's teleological narrative of accelerated progress and perfectability Instead the authors argue that the term human itself is better understood as a concept perpetually undergoing revision and is necessarily subject to scrutiny The contributors here are thus concerned with investigating the following questions What does it mean to be human or to have a self What is the current place or status of the human in the contemporary world As technology is increasingly used to modify our bodies and minds to what extent should we alter and how can we improve our very understanding of human nature The authors contend that literature is the art form best placed to answer these questions In its dynamism and discursiveness literature has the capacity to both reflect dominant discourses and ideologies as well as to generate and even anticipate social change to critique and refine conventional ideas and existing cultural modes and to envision new possibilities for the future The human and its literary representation in other words are inherently intertwined Affirmative Reaction
