Triphammer Falls League Jewish Romance:

Triphammer Falls Robert Eisenman, 2015-12-13 Sixty years ago James Levin a liberated Jew from the New Jersey Suburbs met up by accident at a Fraternity Party with Suzanne Fisher a Jewish girl from Brooklyn whom generally he would have looked down upon A junior he had just transferred his interests in Einstein and nuclear physics to Nietzsche Joyce and classical music while she a totally unknown Freshman was just being rushed by several Jewish Sororities they had such things in those days Fraternities too even in his father's who had also belonged to one A Jewish girl from Brooklyn That was unheard of Impossible He could not be seen dead with such a girl especially by his brother finishing up his ROTC service in Korea But this one was different This one could play the piano and when she played her fingers moved over the keyboard as if in a dream This one had transferred from Erasmus H S in Brooklyn to The New York School of Performing Arts and could play Chopin by heart as if she owned him caressed him loved him and she had been in Paris This one he could not resist Why could she play Chopin as if inhabiting his soul Because of her father a refugee from Vienna and in Brooklyn nothing more than a lowly numbers collector though her mother's father had built some early pushcart activity in this same Brooklyn to a Seat on the New York Stock Exchange Her father who had lost a sister whom he obviously adored to the Nazis during the War spared no mercy in beating his only daughter into her replica Both presumably could play Chopin and yes her father beat her beat her to the point that she was petrified of him This was the girl James Levin suddenly encountered in the middle of his Junior Year at Cornell Something of a change from Eisenman's usual genre a novel fiction instead of discourse which the public might find even more attractive as he was probably a better writer then before he went academic Therefore though some 55 years old nothing has been changed in the manuscript so well did it read in the original except some punctuation and sentence structure Because Triphammer Falls was written shortly after the pivotal Time Period being portrayed in the late 50's it offers a veritable time capsule of a Period people still find and realize to be fascinating A real change of pace for him it was in fact written before people like Thomas Pynchon who preceded him at Cornell but quit to join the Navy wrote V and Philip Roth who was writing about the people he knew personally in South Orange NJ especially the girl with the nose job who went around with a diaphragm in her purse and whose brother went on to play basketball at Ohio State wrote many of his works Not only is it extremely well written but the authenticity of the writing gives one a sense of reading really fine literature rather than simply a good novel and what is especially noteworthy or impressive is how the work captures a Period now vanished with a feel like you're there immediacy As such it is a fluid and informal first person narrative just as accurate as Roth but perhaps even more attractive It covers first loves and partying Ivy League style in a world few still remember when College life was a different world and the Fraternity House was a Gentleman's League Something of a preamble to or cross between Madmen and The Social Network somewhere between the Beats and the Hippies a young man has to choose between the neat path laid out for him in New York City's corporate world and Madison

Avenue or another road that will take him across Continents The protagonist unexpectedly falls in love with Suzanne Fisher a Freshman just when he is on the verge of leaving College to find his own way in a rapidly changing world In the end the reader is left to wonder whether it is Suzanne Fisher a talented and ambitious pianist or his own non conformity that will send him on a different path through countries and halfway round the world Triphammer Falls: An Ivy League Romance Robert Eisenman, 2019-02-12 Sixty years ago James Levin a liberated Jew from the New Jersey Suburbs met up by accident at a Fraternity Party with Suzanne Fisher a Jewish girl from Brooklyn whom generally he would have looked down upon A junior he had just transferred his interests in Einstein and nuclear physics to Nietzsche Joyce and classical music while she a totally unknown Freshman was just being rushed by several Jewish Sororities they had such things in those days Fraternities too even in his father's who had also belonged to one A Jewish girl from Brooklyn That was unheard of Impossible He could not be seen dead with such a girl especially by his brother finishing up his ROTC service in Korea But this one was different This one could play the piano and when she played her fingers moved over the keyboard as if in a dream This one had transferred from Erasmus H S in Brooklyn to The New York School of Performing Arts and could play Chopin by heart as if she owned him caressed him loved him and she had been in Paris This one he could not resist Why could she play Chopin as if inhabiting his soul Because of her father a refugee from Vienna and in Brooklyn nothing more than a lowly numbers collector though her mother's father had built some early pushcart activity in this same Brooklyn to a Seat on the New York Stock Exchange Her father who had lost a sister whom he obviously adored to the Nazis during the War spared no mercy in beating his only daughter into her replica Both presumably could play Chopin and yes her father beat her beat her to the point that she was petrified of him This was the girl James Levin suddenly encountered in the middle of his Junior Year at Cornell Something of a change from Eisenman's usual genre a novel fiction instead of discourse which the public might find even more attractive as he was probably a better writer then before he went academic Therefore though some 55 years old nothing has been changed in the manuscript so well did it read in the original except some punctuation and sentence structure Because Triphammer Falls was written shortly after the pivotal Time Period being portrayed in the late 50's it offers a veritable time capsule of a Period people still find and realize to be fascinating A real change of pace for him it was in fact written before people like Thomas Pynchon who preceded him at Cornell but quit to join the Navy wrote V and Philip Roth who was writing about the people he knew personally in South Orange NJ especially the girl with the nose job who went around with a diaphragm in her purse and whose brother went on to play basketball at Ohio State wrote many of his works Not only is it extremely well written but the authenticity of the writing gives one a sense of reading really fine literature rather than simply a good novel and what is especially noteworthy or impressive is how the work captures a Period now vanished with a feel like you're there immediacy As such it is a fluid and informal first person narrative just as accurate as Roth but perhaps even more attractive It covers first loves and partying Ivy League style in a world few still remember when College life was a
