Oregon Historical Quarterly Oregon Historical Society,2009 Choice ,2008 Electrifying the Rural American West Leah S. Glaser,2009-11-01 Most Americans consider electricity essential to their lives but the historic disparity of its distribution and use challenges notions of a democratic lifestyle economy and culture By the beginning of the twentieth century substations wires towers and poles had followed migrants westward as the industrial era s most prominent symbols of progress and power When private companies controlled power production electrical transmission and distribution without regulation they argued that it was not economically feasible for many ethnic and rural communities to access the grid Yet government agents continued to advocate electrical living through federal programs that reached into and across farming communities and American Indian reservations to homogenize and assimilate them through urban technologies In the end however rural electrification was a locally directed process subject to local and regional issues concerns and parameters Electrifying the Rural American West provides a social and cultural history of rural electrification in the West Using three case studies in Arizona Leah S Glaser details how when examined from the local level the process of electrification illustrates the impact of technology on places economies and lifestyles in the diverse communities and landscapes of the American West As today s policy makers advocate building more power lines as a tool to bring democracy to faraway places and smart grids to deliver renewable energy they would do well to review the historical relationship of Americans with electronic power production distribution and regulation

California through Native Eyes William J. Bauer, Jr., Jr., 2016-06-01 Bauer tells California history strictly through Native perspectives Most California histories begin with the arrival of the Spanish missionaries in the late eighteenth century and conveniently skip to the Gold Rush of 1849 Noticeably absent from these stories are the perspectives and experiences of the people who lived on the land long before European settlers arrived Historian William Bauer seeks to correct that oversight through an innovative approach that tells California history strictly through Native perspectives Using oral histories of Concow Pomo and Paiute workers taken as part of a New Deal federal works project Bauer reveals how Native peoples have experienced and interpreted the history of the land we now call California Combining these oral histories with creation myths and other oral traditions he demonstrates the importance of sacred landscapes and animals and other nonhuman actors to the formation of place and identity He also examines tribal stories of ancestors who prophesied the coming of white settlers and uses their recollections of the California Indian Wars to push back against popular narratives that seek to downplay Native resistance The result both challenges the California story and enriches it with new voices and important points of view serving as a model for understanding Native historical perspectives in other regions
