Abstract The aim of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of young adults. The study was conducted in a university in Turkey. The study group consisted of 30 young adults (15 males and 15 females) who were between the ages of 18 and 25. The study group was divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not receive any training, while the experimental group received a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The physical health of the participants was measured using a variety of tests, including heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The psychological health of the participants was measured using a variety of tests, including anxiety, depression, and self-esteem. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly better physical and psychological health than the control group after 12 weeks of training. The study suggests that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological health of young adults.
