Written from an international perspective, chapters present the perspectives and experiences of architects and engineers from across the globe. Historically successful approaches are integrated with modern design concepts to create novel sustainable and resource-conscious solutions. The scope of topics covered includes natural ventilation, cooling and heating, daylight and shading devices, and green micro-climate and functional facades, making this a useful reference for a wide range of researchers and workers in the built environment. Covers the most up-to-date research, developments, best practices, and innovations from countries all over the globe. Presents the latest research in vernacular architecture and sustainable building. Building Futures Richard Garber, 2023-08-29 BUILDING FUTURES An approach to Information Modeling engaging concepts of equality, sustainability, and labor as they relate to environment and architectural practice. Building Futures: Technology, Ecology, and Architectural Practice explores how architects and the buildings and environments we create can engage future realities, both abstract and readily understood. These range from climate change and public health to advanced ideas about manufacture and construction. The text demonstrates multiple and hybrid paths in which building information modeling (BIM) and outgrowth technological processes, including environmental simulation and human-robot interaction, can be utilized in today's contemporary context, expanding the architect's agency by focusing on a more conceptual and ecological basis for our work. Moving beyond a basic understanding of the role of computation in architecture and design, the work shows how to think critically and speculatively about technology's deeper and more lasting impacts on both architecture and society. Topics covered in Building Futures include Technology, information modeling, and the relationship between computational and real objects; new approaches to coding in architectural design and direct-to-manufacture workflows; Environment, understanding part-to-whole relationships at a variety of scales, and the interconnectedness of things; post-subjective architectural approaches to ecology and new ideas about sustainability; Practice, revisiting architecture by remote control in the time of new global challenges and novel ideas about creativity, authorship, and professionalism; Design, professionals and practice leaders grappling with the relationship of technology to design pedagogy will use Building Futures to better theorize and execute their architectural vision Students in upper level courses studying technique and theory will also find value in the work which prepares incoming professionals for the major changes that the Architecture Engineering and Construction AEC industry may undergo in the coming years and decades The book prompts us to consider simulating events where architecture and architects could mitigate redirect or develop contingencies in relation to the environment flows of material and capital and other things that operate from the immediate through to almost geological timescales From the Foreword by Robert Stuart Smith Director of the Autonomous Manufacturing Lab University of Pennsylvania Biomimetica e Architettura. Urban Transformations and Sustainability Frank D. van der Hoeven, H.J. Rosemann, 2006-04-15 The contributions presented are reflecting the ongoing efforts to redefine the discipline of urbanism under globally changing conditions The conditions of urban development are changing rapidly technological transformations new transportation and distribution systems communication technologies globalisation and environment problems all cause new challenges The planning of the future can no longer be based on the certainty of programs and conditions Instead the planner is confronted with changing conditions and shifting programs In this framework more than before design approaches will be pivotal Exploratory research the reflexive exploration of spatial potentials and the integration of design methods in spatial research will become a key issue for the scientific development of the discipline The Delft University of Technology intensified and enlarged the research in the field of urban transformation and sustainability and new issues and methodological approaches were discussed in order to develop new research
