Working and Mothering in Asia Theresa W. Devasahayam, Brenda S. A. Yeoh, 2007 Large numbers of women in Asia engage in paid work in many cases outside the home Some of them simply need to support their families Others particularly educated women hope to develop rewarding careers Many of these women also continue to shoulder the home and family responsibilities that social and cultural norms define as their primary concern In an effort to balance the conflicting demands of these roles women in various Asian societies are negotiating contesting and reconfiguring motherhood Back cover

Family, Work and Wellbeing in Asia Ming-Chang Tsai, Wan-chi Chen, 2017-04-08 This book delivers timely research on the various interfaces of family and work and their impacts on individual wellbeing in East and Southeast Asia It highlights changing family structures and processes with special attention to inter generational relationships gender roles cultural norms and employment The book presents both qualitative and quantitative research works adopting a comparative approach to analyze a number of demographics In depth field studies are also included which present in detail the daily efforts of certain populations to attain better living standards by mobilizing available resources from within and outside the family As such the book is a valuable addition to contemporary research perspectives on family work and living conditions in Asia

Working and Mothering in Asia Theresa W. Devasahayam, Brenda S. A. Yeoh, 2007 Many women in Asia engage in full time work and continue to shoulder home and familial responsibilities in accordance to social and cultural norms As larger structural economic historical and social forces impinge upon the way women negotiate roles as mother and worker in everyday life the definition of motherhood in Asia as in other parts of the world is highly nuanced and variegated The model of the male as breadwinner a feature of middle and upper class households has undergone tremendous change in recent time Increasingly women particularly those who are better educated have entered the job market owing to rising costs of living and a desire to work This book examines how Asian women negotiate contest and reconfigure motherhood in a region characterised by different cultures societies ethnic religious and class groupings This book reveals recurrent themes on patriarchy labour and relationship strategies of accommodation conflict and emotion management the role of fathers socio cultural definitions of good mothering and the political meanings of maternity and family and last but not least it provides an important counterpoint to studies based on white middle class North Americans which is the focus of much of the earlier research on this subject
