Violence Against Women Under International Human Rights Law:

Violence against Women under International Human Rights Law Alice Edwards, 2010-12-23 Since the mid 1990s increasing international attention has been paid to the issue of violence against women. However, there is still no explicit international human rights treaty prohibition on violence against women and the issue remains poorly defined and understood under international human rights law. Drawing on feminist theories of international law and human rights, this critical examination of the United Nations legal approaches to violence against women analyses the merits of strategies which incorporate women's concerns of violence within existing human rights norms such as equality norms, the right to life and the prohibition against torture. Although feminist strategies of inclusion have been necessary as well as symbolically powerful for women, the book argues that they also carry their own problems and limitations. These prevent a more radical transformation of the human rights system and ultimately reinforce the unequal position of women under international law.

International Human Rights Law and Crimes Against Women in Turkey Ayşe Güneş, 2020-12-20 This book evaluates the effectiveness of current international human rights law and in particular the recent Istanbul Convention in eradicating so-called honour killings in Turkey. So-called honour killings have become an issue of concern for the international community. In Turkey, in particular, the practice still exists despite the adoption of the relevant human rights instruments. The book argues that the improvement of the status of women in Turkey in accordance with gender equality as well as the application of the principle of state due diligence, both requirements of the Istanbul Convention and international human rights law, are fundamental means towards eradicating the killing of women in the name of honour. Using feminist approaches, in particular the intersectionality approach, the study looks at the application of such standards as well as the current obstacles. Through such a lens, the study discusses the strengths and weaknesses of the Turkish Constitution, Turkish Civil Code, Turkish Penal Code and Law to Protect Family and Prevent Violence Against Women and questions the judicial approach to the implementation of the women's right to life. It identifies the lacunae in the Turkish legislation that allow inadequate legal protection for women and the inconsistency of the judicial approach to the definition of the so-called honour killings in the judgements. The study then recommends some concrete amendments to the relevant legal provisions in order to better reflect the international framework and the feminist approaches. The book will be a valuable resource for academics, researchers and policy makers in the areas of international human rights law and feminist legal theory.

Violence against women's health in international law Sara De Vido, 2020-06-12 This electronic version has been made available under a Creative Commons BY-NC-ND open access license. Violence against women is characterised by its universality, the multiplicity of its forms and the intersectionality of diverse kinds of discrimination against women. Great emphasis in legal analysis has been placed on sex-based discrimination; however, in investigations of violence, one aspect has been overlooked: violence may severely affect women's health and access to reproductive health, and State health policies might be a cause of violence.

against women Exploring the relationship between violence against women and women s rights to health and reproductive health Sara De Vido theorises the new concept of violence against women s health in international law using the Hippocratic paradigm enriching human rights based approaches to women s autonomy and reflecting on the pervasiveness of patterns of discrimination At the core of the book are two dimensions of violence horizontal inter personal and vertical state policies Investigating these dimensions through decisions made by domestic regional and international judicial or quasi judicial bodies De Vido reconceptualises States obligations and eventually asks whether international law itself is the ultimate cause of violence against women s health An electronic edition of this book is freely available under a Creative Commons CC BY NC ND licence

The Legal Protection of Women From Violence Rashida Manjoo,Jackie Jones,2018-03-22 Violence against women remains one of the most pervasive human rights violations in the world today and it permeates every society at every level Such violence is considered a systemic widespread and pervasive human rights violation experienced largely by women because they are women Yet at the international level there is a gap in the legal protection of women from violence There is currently no binding international convention that explicitly prohibits such violence or calls for its elimination or mandates the criminalisation of all forms of violence against women This book critically analyses the treatment of violence against women in the United Nations system and in three regional human rights systems Each chapter explores the advantages and disadvantages coming from the legal instruments the work of the monitoring systems and the resulting findings and jurisprudence The book proposes that the gap needs to be addressed through a new United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Violence against Women or alternatively an Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination against Women A new Convention or Optional Protocol would be part of the transformative agenda that is needed to normatively address the promotion of a life free of violence for women the responsibility of states to act with due diligence in the elimination of all forms of violence against all women and the systemic challenges that are the causes and consequences of such violence

Domestic Violence and International Law Bonita Meyersfeld,2010-03-23 Domestic Violence and International Law argues that certain forms of domestic violence are a violation of international human rights law The argument is based on the international law principle that where a state fails to protect a vulnerable group of people from harm whether perpetrated by the state or private actors it has breached its obligations to protect against human rights violation This book provides a comprehensive legal analysis for why a state should be accountable in international law for allowing women to suffer extreme forms of domestic violence and how this can help individual victims It is irrelevant that the violence is perpetrated by individuals and not state actors such as soldiers or the police The state s breach of its responsibility is in its failure to act effectively in domestic violence cases and in its silent endorsement of the violence it becomes complicit The book seeks to reformulate academic and political debate on domestic violence and the responsibility of states under international law It is based on empirical data combined with an honest assessment of whether or not domestic violence is recognised by the international community as a human rights violation Domestic Violence in International Law provides an original provocative and much needed legal framework for the coherent development of a norm against domestic violence in international human rights law Dr Meyersfeld has developed a thoroughgoing analysis that asks and answers the most difficult questions often neglected by academics lawyers and activists who dismiss the possibility that systemic violence against women could violate international law Most fundamentally this book is memorable for the hope and optimism it expresses about the transformative possibilities of international law For without compromising such intensely human values as privacy autonomy and cultural identity Dr Meyersfeld moves her reader with an abiding conviction that international law fueled with the power of transnational actors can propel public actors to protect abused and vulnerable people in their most private worlds From the Foreword by Harold Koh The Legal Adviser United States Department of State 2009

International Human Rights Law and Structural Discrimination

Elisabeth Veronika Henn, 2019-07-03 International courts and other actors are increasingly taking into account pre existing social structures and inequalities when addressing and redressing human rights violations in particular discrimination against specific groups To date however academic legal research has paid little attention to this gentle turn in international human rights law and practice to address structural discrimination In order to address this gap this study analyses whether and to what extent international and regional human rights frameworks foresee positive obligations for State parties to address structural discrimination and more precisely gender hierarchies and stereotypes as root causes of gender based violence In order to answer this question the book analyses whether or not international human rights law requires pursuing a root cause sensitive and transformative approach to structural discrimination against women in general and to the prevention protection and reparation of violence against women in particular to what extent international courts and quasi judicial bodies address State responsibility for the systemic occurrence of violence against women and its underlying root causes whether or not international courts and monitoring bodies have suitable tools for addressing structural discrimination within the society of a contracting party and the limits to a transformative approach

International Human Rights Law and Domestic Violence

Ronagh J.A. McQuigg, 2011-04-06 This book examines the effectiveness of international human rights law through the case study of domestic violence This book asks whether international human rights law can only be effective in traditional cases of human rights abuse or whether it can rise to the challenge of being used in relation to such an issue as domestic violence The book focuses primarily on the question of how international human rights law could be used in relation to domestic violence in the United Kingdom The book considers recent case law from the European Court of Human Rights on domestic violence and whether the UK courts could use the Human Rights Act 1998 to assist victims of domestic violence The book goes on to look in detail at the statements of the international human rights bodies on domestic violence with particular focus on those made by the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and the Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women The book explores the impact that the statements have had so far on the UK government's policy in relation to domestic violence Bringing International Human Rights Law Home United Nations.
