Evidentiality and Perception Verbs in English and German Richard J. Whitt, 2010 Evidentiality the linguistic encoding of a speaker's or writer's evidence for an asserted proposition has begun to receive serious attention from linguists only in the last quarter century Much of this attention has focused on languages that encode evidentiality in the grammar while much less interest has been shown in languages that express evidentiality through means other than inflectional morphology In English and German for instance the verbs of perception those verbs denoting sight sound touch smell and taste are prime carriers of evidential meaning This study surveys the most prominent of the perception verbs in English and German across all five sensory modalities and accounts for the range of evidential meanings by examining the general polysemy found among perception verbs as well as the specific complementation patterns in which these verbs occur

Linguistic Realization of Evidentiality in European Languages Gabriele Diewald, Elena Smirnova, 2010-11-19 This book presents a selection of contributions to the workshop Linguistic realization of evidentiality in European languages held at the 30th Annual Convention of the German Society of Linguistics in Bamberg February 27 29 2008 and additional papers which have been especially commissioned for this volume Its main focus lies on providing further empirical evidence about languages that have various lexical as well as grammatical evidential expressions The papers in this volume will offer a cross linguistic perspective on this topic as they deal with a number of different language families and languages Romance languages French Spanish Italian Germanic languages Dutch German English Icelandic Baltic and Slavic languages Greek Basque and Turkish Elective Affinities Lydia Goehr, 2008 As illustrated in Goethe's famous novel of the same name elective affinities are powerful relationships that crystallize under changing conditions In this new book Lydia Goehr focuses on the history of elective affinities between philosophy and music from German classicism romanticism and idealism to the modernist aesthetic theory of Theodor W Adorno and Arthur C Danto Aesthetic theory she argues depends on a dynamic philosophy of history centered on tendencies yearnings needs and potentialities With this in mind she recasts the theses of

Adorno and Danto regarding the death or end of philosophy art music and human experience as arguments for continuation and survival Elective Affinities tracks the migration of aesthetic and critical theory from Germany to the United States following the catastrophic period of the twentieth century marked by the Second World War Music, Madness, and the Unworking of Language John T Hamilton, 2013-05-14 John T Hamilton investigates how literary philosophical and psychological treatments of music and madness challenge the limits of representation thereby creating a crisis of language He particularly focuses on the decidedly autobiographical impulse of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries where musical experience and mental disturbance disrupt the expression of referential thought illuminating the irreducible aspects of the self before language can work them back into a discursive system The study begins in the 1750s with Diderot's Neveu de Rameau and situates that text in relation to Rousseau's reflections on the voice and the burgeoning discipline of musical aesthetics Hamilton then traces the linkage of music and madness that courses through the work of Herder Hegel Wackenroder and Kleist before turning his attention to E T A Hoffmann whose writings of the first decades of the nineteenth century accumulate and qualify preceding traditions Throughout his analysis Hamilton considers the particular representations that link music and madness exploring underlying motives preconceptions and ideological premises that facilitate the association of these two experiences
