Background: There are 40 recognized ethnic indigenous populations groups and 120 languages spoken in Mexico. Indigenous peoples are concentrated in specific countries and states, producing a regional distribution. Despite a long history, 44% of the Mexican population remains indigenous. There have been efforts to promote indigenous culture, but little has been done to address the educational needs of the population in the context of bilingual and bicultural education. The objective of this research was to identify the educational needs of indigenous populations in the state of Mexico, and to propose a model of bilingual education for the state of Mexico, based on the results of the research.
