Therapist Self-Disclosure Graham S. Danzer, 2018-09-03. Therapist Self-Disclosure gives clinicians professional and practical guidance on how and when to self-disclose in therapy. Chapters weave together theory, research, case studies, and applications to examine types of self-disclosure, timing factors, and dynamics of the therapeutic relationship, ethics in practice, and cultural, demographic, and vulnerability factors. Chapter authors then examine self-disclosure with specific client populations, including clients who are LGBTQ, Christian, multicultural, suffering from eating disorders or trauma in forensic settings, at risk for suicide with an intellectual disability, or are in recovery for substance abuse. This book will be very helpful to graduate students, early career practitioners, and more seasoned professionals who have wrestled with decisions about whether to self-disclose under various clinical circumstances.

Trauma and the Therapeutic Relationship David Murphy, Stephen Joseph, Belinda Harris, 2013-11-18. Research shows that the therapeutic relationship can offer a catalyst for healing, helping traumatized clients to make sense of and rebuild their lives. This book provides practitioners with expert insight into supporting clients' recovery from trauma by placing the therapeutic relationship at the heart of the therapeutic process. It explores the role of the therapeutic relationship across a wide range of theoretical perspectives, including humanistic psychodynamic and cognitive behavioural approaches It brings together specialists from across the globe to provide practitioners with the latest thinking about client centred work with trauma It considers particular aspects of psychological trauma including posttraumatic stress and posttraumatic growth This is the first book to combine trauma recovery with the therapeutic relationship As such it is an important textbook for everyone with an interest in trauma therapy whether as an aspect of training or of practice
