During the past few years, the number of people who have been diagnosed with AIDS has increased significantly. This is due to the fact that the disease is now more common than ever before. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reports that in 1991, there were over 40,000 new cases of AIDS in the United States. This is a significant increase from the 1980s, when the number of cases was much lower. The CDC also reports that the number of people who have died from AIDS has increased significantly. In 1991, there were over 15,000 deaths from AIDS in the United States. This is a significant increase from the 1980s, when the number of deaths was much lower. The CDC also reports that the number of people who have been diagnosed with AIDS has increased significantly. In 1991, there were over 40,000 new cases of AIDS in the United States. the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese, but by 2000, that number had risen to 22 percent. And in 2008, the number of obese people in the United States was 33 percent, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The increase in obesity is a major public health concern because it is a leading cause of heart disease, diabetes, and other chronic diseases. The CDC estimates that obesity costs the United States $147 billion in medical costs each year. The CDC also estimates that obesity is responsible for 280,000 deaths each year. The CDC has launched a campaign to reduce obesity, called "Let's Move!," which aims to get children and adults more active and eating healthier. The campaign includes a variety of initiatives, such as promoting physical activity in schools and workplaces, and encouraging healthier eating habits. The CDC also has a website, letsmove.gov, where people can find more information about the campaign and how to get involved.
