Ecotourism Stephen Wearing, John Neil, 2013-06-17 Ecotourism outlines the phenomenon of Ecotourism, its sources, and its development as a concept. Conservation issues are now at the forefront of public opinion. Nature is calling us to its wilds, and we are responding in droves. The decline of natural rainforests, loss of endangered species, global warming, and land degradation have galvanised public support for conservation. The interest in Ecotourism and nature orientated tourism has coincided with this worldwide concern. Using relevant case studies, Ecotourism examines the potential positive social and environmental benefits of Ecotourism and is ideal for both students of tourism and practitioners within the tourism industry. Ecotourism will also be of interest to environmental groups, land managers, academics, and planners. Indeed, anyone interested in examining what Ecotourism is and how it may hold the potential to solve or at least mitigate several of the great problems of our age. An example being arguably the greatest of these dilemmas: to satisfy human needs for employment, income, and economic development while at the same time protecting the environment. Stephen Wearing and John Neil are both lecturers at the School of Tourism Studies, University of Technology Sydney, Australia.

In Part 3, various management, marketing, and branding initiatives are identified as a means of expanding the tourism business. Part 4 examines the negative impacts of mass tourism and its threats to culture, tradition, identity, the built environment, and natural heritage. In the final and fifth part, future challenges and opportunities for community-based tourism initiatives are considered, and research-based sustainable solutions are proposed. Overall, the book considers engaging local populations in tourism development as a way of building stronger and more resilient communities. This Handbook fills a void in the current research and thus will appeal to scholars, students, and practitioners interested in tourism management, tourism geography, business,
